FOR WINTER WEAR
KELLY'S of Grafton Street are showing a remarkably fine collection of warm winter Overcoats, by far the most comprehensive ever displayed by this enterprising House, and the range of prices equals the range of materials and models. FOUR GUINEAS buys a really good-looking overcoat, and quite as good as it looks, hand-tailored in all essentials. FIVE GUINEAS buys a better coat. SIX GUINEAS a still better, and so on up to TEN GUINEAS, and here imagination will not serve. The TEN GUINEA COAT must be seen. A recent purchaser described it as "a possession," not merely an overcoat.
THE NEW HOUSE FOR MEN is an ideal setting for its merchandise. Men can buy in comfort and with confidence. Every purchase carries a guarantee of satisfaction or money back; every purchaser can rely on the integrity of the house that has risen in 10 years to the premier position in its own business. It is a great achievement.
LOUNGE SUITS—Made to measure or ready to wear—5 Guineas to 7½ Guineas.

GRIT AND SHELL.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

It is a mistake to suppose that food is ground by grit in the gizzard. Grain is first softened in the crop by the juices secreted therein; then it passes to the stomach, which further assists in the process of digestion. After this it enters the gizzard, which reduces the food into pulp. The grit which may be in the gizzard is ground with the food and passes out with it. Shell material is necessary for the formation of the egg shell, and frequently the birds are not able to obtain enough of this in the soil, so that there should always be a supply of lime grit or oyster shell in a box or other receptacle where they can help themselves. When hens are in full lay they devour a lot of this, so that they should not be left without it, as a deficiency may result in shelless eggs or weak shells.

His health was "just all right" but no more. He was given lots of nourishing food; but his appetite went off at times and he was too fond of books and the fireside.

A friend of mother's suggested Carrageen as an energy builder. The boy liked it, and kept asking for more. Result—putting on weight, got a good colour, full of bounce and play, and mischief. Appetite tremendous.

You see Carrageen supplied the mineral salts that were short in his other perfectly good food. It added the vital spark that gives "life" to nerves and glands. Give your children Carrageen every day and note their extra vigour in a few weeks.

The Vital Spark that gives Life to other Foods.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

A HERO OF THE ANTARCTIC.

Edward Wilson of the Antarctic. By George Seaver, M.A., B.D. London: Murray. 10/6 net.

DR. WILSON, friend and closest companion of Captain Scott, with whom he died on their return journey from the South Pole in 1912, has been described by those who knew him as a great and noble-hearted Englishman. The truth of this statement is apparent to all who have read any of the stirring accounts of these two expeditions. Now, after a lapse of twenty years, Mr. Seaver places before us an enthralling and intimate life-story of this remarkable man, who was an explorer, artist, naturalist, and ornithologist of high standing. It is a record of a life full of sincerity, self-sacrifice and untiring energy. Behind all this is the unfailing courage of a man who knew no fear, yet was endowed with the kindliest of dispositions.

Almost an invalid at the time when he joined the first expedition, Dr. Wilson never spared himself, however heavy the task. Although, in the capacity of junior surgeon and zoologist to this expedition, his time was fully occupied, he was always ready to help in other departments. He was a born artist, and it is recorded of him that after the most fatiguing day he would spend several hours sketching the Antarctic scenery. Captain Scott frequently commented on the wonderful accuracy of these sketches, often executed under the worst possible conditions, due to low temperature and snow blindness. The following extract from Dr. Wilson's diary bears testimony:—

March 28th, 1902. Marched again the whole day with both eyes blindfolded, as I wanted to be able to sketch this new range, the biggest we have met with and the farthest south we shall see . . . My left eye still quite useless, but I got a sketch of the whole grand sight with one eye.

Having the qualifications of field-naturalist, bacteriologist and doctor, Dr. Wilson was selected in 1905 to carry out the special investigation of grouse disease. He did an enormous amount of work in this direction, dissecting and examining nearly 2,000 grouse, and writing at least one third of the two quarto volumes which form the report of that investigation. He neither saw this report, published in 1911, in print, nor the publication of his sketches in that standard work, "A History of British Mammals," edited by his friend, the famous Irish naturalist, Major Barrett-Hamilton, whose sudden death took place in South Georgia less than two years after that of Dr. Wilson.

Altogether, this is a most impressive and touching life-story. The spirit of nobleness, sincerity and courage manifests itself up to the very last, and is reflected in Dr. Wilson's last letters to his wife, written when death was rapidly approaching.

The book is beautifully illustrated from sketches and water-colour paintings by Dr. Wilson. In addition to some striking Antarctic pictures, they include a sketch of Blarney Castle, and a water-colour study of Dingle Bay, selected from a number of landscapes executed by him during a visit to Ireland in 1905.

AN IRISH SOURCE-BOOK.

Cora Cainnte ar Tir Conaill. Seán MacMaoláin do cheiliod. Baile Átha Cliath: Oifig Díolta Foilleachán Rialtasuir. 3/6.

THE richness of Mr. Seán MacMaoláin's Gaelic vocabulary and idiom has been noticed recently in reviews of his translations of novels by O'Grady and Carleton. That richness is the more noteworthy because Mr. MacMaoláin is not what is termed—not too happily—"a native speaker." His Irish is, in fact, an acquired language. The elements he learnt in Belfast; the vocabulary and the idiom and accent in all their wealth he mastered in Donegal. Needless to say, this deep and accurate knowledge is the result of years of hard work, and it is many a long day since Mr. MacMaoláin began to learn phrase by phrase from Feidhlimidh Aherne in rambles around Belfast, and then to polish what he had learned by living among good Irish speakers in Donegal.

Since those early days Mr. MacMaoláin has become one of the most successful teachers and speakers of Gaelic in Ireland. As his translations show, he can write, too, with grace and style, and his knowledge of the literary language is no less profound and thorough than his knowledge of the spoken language.

Here in this volume of "Cora Cainnte as Tir Chonaill" is what may be fairly described as one of MacMaoláin's source-books—a notebook of phrases and idioms which he has been compiling over a period of years. These phrases are taken mostly from the speech of the Rosses in Donegal, and every one of them is fine, vigorous, living Irish. The arrangement is alphabetical, and follows the order adopted by Father McClune in his valuable "Réilthíní Oir." The compiler takes a word and explains it by a number of phrases and sentences in which it occurs in the usage of good speakers. In this way the student not only becomes familiar with some two thousand words in daily use, but is helped to assimilate thousands of phrases which are the general working stuff of the language. The student who gets a real grip on the material collected here will have laid for himself a solid foundation of spoken and written Irish. With all due respect to cúigeachas, and without ignoring the virtues as well as the shortcomings of An Gúm, this volume can be proclaimed one of the best and most useful of all those for which the Stationery Office is responsible. It is worth a score of trivial novels, on which translators have laboured painfully.

The publishers, it may be noted, continue to print scéal and sgéal and scríobh and sgríobh. Is it not their proper business to strive after a reasonable and gradually introduced uniformity?

ART—TO-DAY AND YESTERDAY.

Art in My Time. By Frank Rutter. London: Rich and Cowan. 6/- net.

MR. FRANK RUTTER has forestalled as much criticism as possible in his foreword and epilogue, but the general impression that one derives from this little handbook of "Art in My Time" is of hasty work and failing interest. Instead of telling us what artists are doing at the present time, he is concerned chiefly with telling what those artists whose names are now well established were doing when Mr. Rutter first became interested in art. No one can question Mr. Rutter's sensitiveness as a critic, or the sincerity of his appreciation of the early impressionists; but one must regret that his patriotism should make him ignore continental artists of the last decade, and one grieves that a critic of Mr. Rutter's standing, while admitting the importance of Stanley Spencer, Paul Nash and Nevinson, should ignore Max Ernst, Paul Klee or Salvador Dali. It also shows a lack of design that he should devote so much time to Monet, Manet and Renoir, and so little to Picasso and Matisse.

In spite of irritation at the shortcomings of this little volume, it merits a place on one's bookshelves, because where Mr. Rutter appreciates he appreciates lucidly and well, and arouses interest in the work of some minor English artists who are too little known.

SWIFT.

Jonathan Swift: A Critical Essay. By W. D. Taylor. London: Davies. 10/6 net.

MR. TAYLOR'S essay is what it claims to be—a full-length portrait. It is based on a critical re-examination of biographical and literary material, and, if the outlines are here and there uncertain, that is due to lack of evidence. Mr. Taylor's determination not to weigh down the scale with partisan opinion is valuable to the student, but rather annoying for the general reader. He is "inclined to think" that the marriage with Stella was a myth. He refuses to commit himself about Vanessa, but leaves the reader to conclude that Swift became her lover out of pity for her infatuation. He strikes an even balance between the personal motives and passionate anger against injustice that led Swift to champion the Irish cause, but "feels" that he is entitled to be called a patriot, though it was "insensibly" that he came to speak for the "native Irish."

However tentative the psychological conclusions, energy is the dominant impression conveyed by this portrait. Whether he made a garden at Laracor, challenged his friends to leap ditches, engaged in a bout of punning, attacked free-thinkers, defended poor clergy, played the buffoon or preached national pride, Swift did it with titanic zest.

No Castle in Spain. By William McFee. Faber and Faber. 7/6 net.

The Village of Souls. By Philip Child. Thornton Butterworth. 7/6 net.

The greater part of the scene of "No Castle in Spain" is laid in the central Andes. Yvonne, an attractive young "copy-writer" in New York, marries a South American millionaire of mixed English and Spanish descent, who is a kind of despot over his vast estates; and the girl, used to the freedom of New York life, is quite unprepared to find herself virtually a prisoner in La Concepción, where Don Frederico Adalbert Manningbury's five unmarried sisters act as her bodyguard. The story is told by a middle-aged man, who, having been twice married, has no wish for further serious entanglement. He is not in love with Yvonne but regards her as he might "a beautiful moth or a lovely yacht." He finds himself forced to play the part of knight errant since, wearied of the enforced seclusion of her life, she has left her husband and is trying to escape to the coast. Mr. McFee sketches a series of strikingly clear and vivid pictures of the various aspects of South American life—in city society, in the mining districts, and in the convent-like seclusion of the Casa Manningbury.

* * * * *

There is nothing suggestive of a first novel about Mr. Child's "Village of Souls," which is a beautifully written story of life in French Canada in 1665. Jornay, a penniless orphan of noble birth, brought up in the Parisian "Cours de Miracles" of the beggars, has been a voyageur in the forest since his immigration to Canada. He marries Lys Favorolles, the beautiful daughter of an unscrupulous adventurer, who, having fled from the amorous advances of an influential Indian, has been deported as a "Fille du Roi." With the intention of returning to France they set out on their journey to the coast. The frustration of their plans; the rescue of "Ann," the mysterious white girl who has been brought up by the Indians; the journey through the trackless forest to find the Mission, and the work among the sick at the Mission of Saint Esprit, are described with a fine artistic power that makes the scene

Beauty. By Faith Baldwin. Sampson Low. 7/6 net.

The heroine of "Beauty" makes for herself as a beauty specialist in New York, and the setting thus provides a freshness to the story of a young girl's struggles by the death of her parents, and with the problem of earning a living unless by the aid of a husband. She is a hero, however, develops surprising powers of toughness, and struggles through to find that the surviving parents have established a temporary government in the north. There is very good reading, but there is no little food for thought, in Miss Black's novel.

* * * * *

There are no frills about Mr. Carlton Dawe's work. He starts off with a stout, old-blooded mystery, and before his detectives have had time to draw a conclusion they trip over a second corpse, and then one or two more for good measure. Whether he plays quite fairly with his readers is a matter of question; the expedient by which he revivifies "Mr. Death" in the middle of the book is apt to jar the reader who likes probability in his "bloods." For the average reader, however, who likes his corpses to come thick and fast, this novel will be just the thing.

A handful of detectives, a Press baron, a bogus Indian mystic, and other entertaining types are the attractions of "The Kidnapper," a bright story which moves from Plymouth through London to the Riviera. The kidnapping itself is little more than an excuse for the book. Sir Basil Thomson's preposterous detective, Peter, makes his appearance from time to time, but the amateurs are more successful, and the smart schoolgirl, Peggy, who, we gather, has also appeared in print before, clears up the mystery in the end.

All Four Winds. By Talbot [illegible] Hutchinson. 7/6 net.

Granted that, in comparison with most people, you like Mr. Talbot Mundy's books, and that adventure stories are your food and drink, you will find "All Four Winds" unusually good value. In it Mr. Mundy has collected four of his most popular novels: "King, of the Khyber Rifles," "Jimgrim," "Black Light" and "Om." The scene of all is laid in India, and all introduce several of Mr. Mundy's most famous and hard-worked characters. The incidents and situations are thoroughly exciting, and explain why this author's popularity rivals that of Rider Haggard and other veterans of the adventure novel proper.

THE EDWARDIAN ERA.

The Victorian Aftermath. By E. Wingfield-Stratford. London: Routledge. 12/6 net.

IN his two preceding volumes Mr. Wingfield-Stratford chronicled the years from the accession of Victoria to the Boer War, and in this completion of the trilogy he deals with the period from the death of the Queen to the outbreak of the Great War. The author does not attempt to present history in the conventional manner: he is a philosopher rather than a historian, a commentator on facts rather than a narrator of events. To enjoy his book, therefore, the reader will need to be fairly well versed in the history of the past thirty years. On the conduct of the Boer War Mr. Wingfield-Stratford is severely critical, holding that much of the heart-burning of that time was due to the fact that the British Army was then "the very citadel of upper-class tradition."

Probably it is as a satirist—particularly as a social satirist—that Mr. Wingfield-Stratford is at his best. There are shrewd observation and fine wit in the chapter dealing with the social changes resulting from the death of Queen Victoria; a slightly acid tone in the excellent chapter entitled "The Journalisation of Thought," in the details of which most readers will find themselves enthusiastically in agreement with the author; and some excellent criticism in the growth of the power of financiers in recent years.

The section entitled "Liberalism on Trial" deals exhaustively with the long Liberal régime under Campbell-Bannerman and Asquith, with the People's Budget, the struggle against the House of Lords, the founding of the Territorial Army and the Mobile Force for overseas service, and other events of the utmost importance—sometimes with approval, but generally with biting criticism. On foreign affairs there is much interesting comment, as there is also on Irish affairs of the period.

THE DRAMA OF WEATHER.

The Drama of Weather. By Sir Napier Shaw. Cambridge: The University Press. 7/6 net.

HERE is a book of outstanding interest. The subject has always been of prime importance, and the weather forecasts which we receive via the wireless every evening remind us of the scientific knowledge and skill now applied to it. Sir Napier Shaw's book is not a scientific treatise on weather, or an "explanation" thereof; rather, it is a presentation of the subject from an original point of view. The elements of weather enact a play, and we are the spectators. First in the book come the dramatis personæ, affording Sir Napier an opportunity, of which he avails himself fully, to show what help the camera can give. All the pictures in this section are remarkably fine, and many of them are strikingly beautiful.

Succeeding chapters tell us about the growth of the subject, the constant watchers of the drama, and the instruments that they use to make their observations definite; the representation of these observations graphically, the existence of rhythm amongst them, and, finally, the presentation of the play by means of the weather map. The limitations of our knowledge are stressed, and there is a very valuable discussion on the question of condensing and representing weather data, which is of great interest and considerable importance. The construction and use of weather maps are explained, together with the mode of interpreting them, in a chapter which will interest everybody.

All this material is, of course, very scientific; but, when presented from a poetical point of view, it makes an irresistible appeal; science and art combine to humanise a subject that might have been a succession of facts. The book is quite an innovation in scientific literature, and may well become the parent of a new type of scientific writing, which will be very welcome if its creators possess the delicious blend of poetry and science so happily found in Sir Napier Shaw. The publishers, too, have done their work supremely well. In a book with so many photographs and drawings it must have been a herculean task to achieve not only beautiful reproductions, but a perfect synthesis between them and the text.

AN ANONYMOUS ADVENTURER.

A Modern Sinbad. London: Harrap. 10/6 net.

TRUTH, they say, is stranger than fiction. If one accepts that dictum, one may swallow even the "tallest" of the many barely credible episodes that go to make up the story of "A Modern Sinbad's" most remarkable career. The reticence which prompts the author of "A Modern Sinbad" to remain anonymous can be well understood. He discloses that in an Australian harbour he once threw a Chinaman overboard to his death—it is true that at the time his own arm had been pinned to the side of the ship by the Chinaman's knife—and that in the Bahamas he reached the point of baring his wife's bosom for the purpose of stabbing her while she slept. Confessions of fraud, drunkenness and many other moral weaknesses also emerge frankly, amid glimpses of a spirit of unselfish comradeship and great physical courage. Moralists will have much material to work on in these remarkable psychological revelations.

It is questionable, however, whether there is any purpose in attempting to remain anonymous when clues to identity are so numerous in the book. The author, after spending most of his first forty years in dire poverty, subsequently earned big sums by writing stories of the sea for American magazines, and was offered the O. Henry memorial prize for short story-writing, but would not fulfil one of the necessary qualifications, which was the assumption of American citizenship. In 1918, his log was published in a West Indian newspaper (which is named) after he had sailed a sloop single-handed through a hurricane. There are several references to contacts which he made with well-known persons, both in England and America.

This is a notable book; a racy tale of a life of vicissitudes, in which misfortune has played an unusually large part, though the victim's own temperament has probably more to answer for than he is inclined to admit.

THE ANTRIM COAST.

Rowlick Rhymes and Songs of Exile. By "North Antrim." Edited and illustrated by Sam Henry, F.R.S.A.(I.). Belfast: The Quota Press. 6/- net.

THIS little "keepsake" volume celebrates in pleasant verse the placenames and everyday life of the Antrim coast. The fishermen and their boats, the kelp-burners, the bold headlands, the local legends and the myriad birds of that basaltic seaboard have prompted tuneful lines, with now the swing of the tide in them, and now the lingering rhythm of remembrance.

The best songs are those with tunes of Northern dialect in them, and readers unfamiliar with local words are not debarred from full enjoyment of

> The peat reek o' the mountain cot,
> An' the whiff o't in the air,
> The brockies and the brown grouse,
> The white fud o' the hare—

for the editor has had the forethought to provide a brief glossary.

The idea of a keepsake book of local verses, illustrated with pictures of the scenes that inspired them, is one that might well be extended to other counties, though photographs are not, perhaps, the best accompaniment to poetry.

SALMON FISHING.

The Art of Salmon Fishing. By Jock Scott. London: Witherby. 10/6 net.

AS a practical treatise on the subject of salmon fishing, Mr. Scott's volume will occupy a place in the first rank. The author has dealt with his subject very thoroughly, and offers sound advice on every problem that faces the beginner. At the same time, it is a book that can be read to advantage by the experienced salmon fisher.

After describing briefly the life-history of the salmon, Mr. Scott considers the subject of tackle, and sets out a summary of the cost of a suitable outfit. The art of casting is dealt with very fully, and a complete account is given of the greased line method. Special chapters are devoted to spring, summer and autumn salmon fishing, with another on salmon fishing afloat.

On the subject of where to fish the author has something to say about the attractions of Norway, Canada, Newfoundland and Labrador, in addition to those of the British Isles. It is interesting to record that, apart from what he has to say about the attractions of other places, the author very definitely states that Galway stands supreme as an angling resort for beginners. "If you cannot catch salmon at Galway," he says, "you most certainly will not do so elsewhere!" In regard to fishing in Ireland, the Ministry of Fisheries, Dublin, possesses a mine of information, and he highly recommends to all his readers "The Angler's Guide to the Irish Free State," published by that department, and already well known to Irish anglers.

ELIZABETHAN PROSE.

Elizabethan Prose. Selected and Prefaced by Michael Roberts. London: Laye. 6/- net.

GOOD anthologies of Elizabethan prose are rare, and we know of none so likely to please the general reader as Mr. Roberts's selection. In all the sections—"Jest Books," "Husbandry," "Manners," "Criticism," "Invective," and the rest—the choice is judicious, and nothing will be found tedious. It is a strange commentary on our general reading that we should be so familiar with the best of the Elizabethan lyric and so neglectful of its prose, and Mr. Roberts's book has performed a genuine service by reminding us how well and how vividly writers like Nashe and Dekker could describe an adventure, or what satire and spirit the Martin Marprelate pamphleteers took to their work. The prose of their day, as the editor puts it in a stimulating and pugnacious introduction, was the "whole man speaking," after which the "deodorised and disinfected writing" of some of our modern masters of prose seems dull, vapid and inadequate.

LETTERS TO AN IMAGINARY SON.

Unborn Son. By Oliver Baldwin. London: Grayson. 10/6 net.

MR. OLIVER BALDWIN'S son has no existence save in his father's imagination; but to this filial figment he has addressed a series of letters containing the author's views and advice on nearly every subject under the sky. They range from "blood-sports" to economics, from diplomacy to play-production, from comparative religion to what the relations between married people ought to be. From his experience in social and political work Mr. Balwin clearly has formed some very definite ideas how the world has gone wrong. He describes the blunders of civilisation, and explains how he would eradicate them in a way that leaves no doubt about his meaning. With its clarity and sincerity, Mr. Baldwin's book is a challenge and a provocation. It will be most unpalatable to a number of people, but certain social theories must be considered now although they would have been ruled out of court a few years ago.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT THE METROPOLE.

There was an attendance of almost six hundred persons at Messrs. Switzer's annual staff dance, which was held in the Metropole Ballroom, Dublin, last night. It was a most enjoyable affair, the ballroom being tastefully decorated, and the guests thoroughly entering into the gay spirit that enlivened the function. Spot dances were an added attraction, but throughout the dancing was first-rate, the music of the Metropole band, under Mr. C. Vincent Rogers, being much appreciated. The arrangements were carried through in a manner that reflected great credit on the Dance Committee, which was composed of Mr. T. Rogers (Chairman), Mr. Edward F. Fatman (Hon. Secretary), Miss D. GALWAY CASE ENDED.

VERDICT FOR THE DEFENDANT.

JUDGE AND EVIDENCE IN IRISH

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA AND A JURY.)

THE hearing was concluded of the action in which Mr. George Lyons, Chief Inspector of Fisheries and Secretary to the Galway Board of Conservators, residing at Bunnakill, Maam Cross, Connemara, claimed damages against the Hon. Standish Bruce O'Grady, a retired captain of the British Army, at present residing at Oughterard, for the alleged seduction of his daughter, Vera Lyons.

The defendant denied the alleged seduction.

Mr. A. E. Wood, K.C., and Mr. Micks (instructed by Messrs. Henry Concannon and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Lavery, K.C., Mr. Dockrell, K.C., and Mr. Kingsmill Moore (instructed by Messrs. MacDermot and Allen) for the defendant.

In his continued cross-examination by Mr. Wood, Captain O'Grady said that the first he knew of a child being born to Vera Lyons was when the Rev. Colonel Ormsby told him some weeks after the event.

Mr. Wood—You want the jury to believe that you were living in the house under the same roof as Vera Lyons and did not know a child had been born in the house?—I had a strong suspicion, but I did not know whether it was born.

In reply to Mr. Justice Hanna, the witness said that he had been told some time before then that Vera Lyons was in trouble. He was told that in Maam Cross.

Mr. Justice Hanna—Would it be a correct inference to draw that you had ceased to take the same interest in the family, and that you did not inquire?—No. I had the same interest, but if I inquired I would have to ask her mother, and she knew that I and Vera were not on speaking terms. In these circumstances it would be awkward for me to ask her about her daughter.

Mr. Justice Hanna—If, as you say, it is true that you were absolutely innocent and if you were like a father or uncle to these people, why did you not say something about her?—Because I think it was Mrs. Lyons's place to say something to me.

Mr. Justice Hanna—You had never heard your name mentioned in connection with Vera up to that time?—Not until the Rev. Colonel Ormsby told me "They are putting it on you."

Mr. Justice Hanna—Is not that a peculiar phrase?—I think it is the usual phrase.

And you said: "That is surprising!"—It did surprise me. I asked him if he thought I was guilty, and he said he did not.

RECTOR'S EVIDENCE.

The Rev. Colonel Ormsby, Rector, Oughterard, stated, in reply to Mr. Dockrell, that he knew the Lyons family since 1929, and had a conversation with Mrs. Lyons in May last. Mrs. Lyons said: "Why should Captain O'Grady be told anything about Vera going with Nee?" and he replied: "Why should he not?" or words to that effect, and that it seemed to him a natural thing to do. He said to Mrs. Lyons that he wanted to call on Captain O'Grady. She asked him not to mention to Captain O'Grady the matter they had been talking about. He asked why, and she said: "He might go and talk about it; he often goes to Maam Cross." She gave him distinctly to understand that she did not wish him to speak to Captain O'Grady, but he did not know if Mrs. Lyons used the words, "not at present." On the occasion of the christening of the child, Vera Lyons said to him that Captain O'Grady was the father of her child. He asked Vera if he would go to Captain O'Grady, and she said: "You must go and ask mother; I have told her everything." In a subsequent conversation she denied meeting another man, except on one occasion.

Cross-examined by Mr. Wood, the witness stated that he did not give a copy of his evidence to the plaintiff's solicitor, as he did not know whether it would be right to do so without consulting the defendant's solicitor, to whom he had made a statement.

By Mr. Justice Hanna—He came to the conclusion that Captain O'Grady was innocent.

"CONSTANTLY TOGETHER."

Annie Walsh, who is fourteen years of age and resides with her grandmother at Oughterard, stated that she frequently visited Bofin Lodge, and became very friendly with Vera. Vera and Nee were constantly together. Vera used to wave a lantern at night, and Nee would come to her from his own house. Vera did not make much of Captain O'Grady, and after August last year she used to run away when she saw him. She said that the captain used to tell her parents everything he saw her sister and herself doing.

On the occasion when she saw Nee and Vera in the furze on the side of the road she stated that she would tell on Vera and Nee, and the latter asked her not to do so. Nee spoke to her and to Vera in English.

In reply to Mr. Justice Hanna, the witness stated that she did not speak Irish, though she had been learning it at school since she was six or seven years of age.

In cross-examination by Mr. Wood, the witness repeated the circumstances under which she threatened to "tell on" Vera Lyons and Nee.

Mr. Justice Hanna—Did you learn that story off?—No.

How does it come that you repeated it in the same words as you did five minutes ago?—I remembered it.

How often have you gone over it?—Just once or twice I thought of it.

This closed the case for the defence.

Mr. Kingsmill Moore, addressing the jury for the defendant, said that he would lay it down as a rule of caution that in cases of that kind it was always unsafe to find a verdict against a man unless he had been confronted with the accusation at the earliest possible time; but it was not until after the birth of the child that Captain O'Grady was accused, and Nee had left for England. Why was not an attempt made to settle the case quietly, instead of first issuing a writ? Had the captain not been innocent, he would not have stayed on at Bofin Lodge.

Counsel was referring to the fact that Nee had given his evidence in Irish, when

Mr. Justice Hanna said—He is entitled to be examined or cross-examined in Irish without comment. Irish is the national language.

Mr. Kingsmill Moore, continuing, said that it was clear that Nee's knowledge of English was not so limited as he pretended. In reference to the fact that the girl, Annie Walsh, had repeated her story in connection with one incident, word for word, he said that that was no reason why her evidence should not be believed. She had not been cross-examined about the veracity of that story. She and the Rev. Colonel Ormsby were independent witnesses, and their testimony was in favour of the defendant.

WITNESSES CRITICISED.

Mr. Wood, for the plaintiff, said that if Lyons, when he learned what had happened, had gone to Captain O'Grady and asked for compensation instead of taking legal action, as he was entitled to do, they would be told that he was going in for blackmail. Regarding the evidence of Anne Walsh, counsel commented on the fact that she had repeated her evidence verbatim when he cross-examined her, and he asked the jury to discredit it. He did not wish to attack the Rev. Colonel Ormsby, but his evidence would be much more valuable to the jury if he gave to the solicitor for the plaintiff a copy of the statement he gave to the defendant's solicitor. He submitted that the story of Vera Lyons was true in every respect, and that it had been amply corroborated.

At the close of counsel's address, Mr. Justice Hanna recalled some of the witnesses and questioned them.

Mrs. Nee stated that she was present when the child was born, and heard Vera Lyons say that the father was Captain O'Grady.

Vera Lyons stated that the evidence given by Captain O'Grady that he had seen herself and Nee together on Christmas Eve, 1931, was untrue. She was not with Nee that evening, which she spent at home.

Joseph Nee was questioned by Mr. Justice Hanna through Mr. Burke, barrister-at-law, who acted as interpreter. Witness, speaking in Irish, denied having been with Vera Lyons on Christmas Eve, 1931. He stated that he spent the night at home.

JUDGE SUMS UP.

Mr. Justice Hanna, in his charge to the jury, said that it was their duty to form as good an opinion as they could of the girl. For the defendant, Mr. Dockrell had boldly stated that this was a plant, and Mr. Moore had stated that it was for greed. Mr. Wood, for the plaintiff, was justified in saying that that was charging the Lyons family with blackmail. Having seen the girl, did it seem to them that she would be a party to originating that charge? The estimate they made of this girl's character was a very important factor in this case. Did she by herself, or by intuition, invent this long series of instances for the purpose of planting the child upon an aristocrat rather than upon a young man who worked upon the road? The jury had to do the same for Captain O'Grady. Did Captain O'Grady commend himself to them as a simple, easy-going Irish gentleman, going from one place to another looking for sport? Or, did they think that he was a roué, and that at some point, as suggested by Mr. Wood, he had designs upon this girl.

While reviewing the evidence Mr. Justice Hanna alluded to the evidence given by one of the witnesses (Joseph Nee) in Irish. "In a way," he said, "the witness was sneered at for giving his evidence in Irish, and it was stated that he knew English. Any person who wishes to speak Irish in Court is entitled to speak it, without any adverse comment being made upon it. It is one thing to know enough English to buy cigarettes or order your dinner, but it is another thing to be examined and cross-examined in English when you do not know that language well. It was a great advantage to us that we had Mr. Fionán Lynch yesterday and Mr. Burke today to act as interpreter."

Referring to the evidence of Annie Walsh, Mr. Justice Hanna said that it was one of the commonest forms of cross-examination where a child gave evidence to have her repeat it, to see if she would repeat it verbatim or tell the matter as she saw it. If the evidence was given in a parrot-like manner, it was an indication that the child had learned something off from a sheet of paper. He suggested to the jury that the manner in which Annie Walsh had repeated her story detracted very considerably from her evidence. It was for the jury to say if she had been thrown into the scale to make weight against the Lyons. Did they think she was a sufficient weight?

VERDICT FOR DEFENDANT.

The jury, after an absence of close on two hours, found in favour of the defendant, and judgment was entered for the defendant accordingly.

Mr. Justice Hanna said that he was obliged to the sergeant of the Civic Guard in charge of that court (Sergeant Navan) for the manner in which he had attended to the needs of the Court for the three days during which the case was heard.

MEATH MAN'S ESTATE.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JOHNSTON.)

In the matter of the estate of Thomas Cunningham, late of Derryconnor, Ballivor, Co. Meath, and in an action brought to administer his estate, Mr. E. M. Wood (instructed by Messrs. Vincent and Beatty) applied to have a consent to settlement received and made a rule of Court.

The plaintiffs were Mary Cunningham, 19 Newland avenue, Hull; Bridget Cunningham, 40 Cornmarket, Dublin; Elizabeth Cunningham, 76 Benburb street, Dublin, and Catherine Fowlston, 19 Newland avenue, Hull. The defendants were Patrick Cunningham, Clondalee, Hill of Down, and James Ryan, Derryconnor, Ballivor, and they were sued as executors of the will of the late Thomas Cunningham, who died on January 19, 1922. The will was dated July 30, 1921, and there were two codicils.

The consent provided for the payment of all legacies due to the plaintiffs, and for the payment of all costs incurred by them.

Mr. Justice Johnston received the consent, and made it a rule of Court.

RENT OF CIVIC GUARD STATION.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE.)

Mr. P. J. McEnery (instructed by Mr. John D. Fitzgerald) applied on behalf of Robert Pilsworth, of Thomastown, Co. Kilkenny, for an order appointing a receiver by way of equitable execution over an annual rent of £30, which, he said, was payable by the Office of Public Works to William Costello, of Mullinavat, in his capacity as landlord of the Civic Guard Station at Mullinavat. The object of the order was to satisfy a judgment for £25 3s. 11d., with interest at 4 per cent. from the 21st November, 1929, and £6 6s. costs, which Mr. Pilsworth obtained against Mr. Costello.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne made an order appointing Mr. Pilsworth receiver.

(BEFORE MR. CUSSEN.)

John Rooney (18), of Upper Dorset street, and Christopher Cumiskey (15½), of Henrietta street, were remanded for a week on a charge of breaking open and stealing the contents of a donation box at St. George's Church, Hardwicke place. Cumiskey, who was allowed bail, was also charged with stealing a pair of shoes from the High School, Granby Row, and pawning them for 6s., of which Rooney received portion.

POST OFFICE OFFICIAL CHARGED.

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Ronald E. Donaldson (38), alias Wilson, of no fixed address, was sent for trial to the Circuit Court on a charge that, being an officer of the Post Office, he, with intent to defraud, issued a telegraph money order for the sum of £20, payable to one Edward King, at Bray Post Office on or about 3rd August, and feloniously received the said £20.

There were other charges of a similar nature in respect of sums of £40 and £27 issued to Belfast.

SHIRT FACTORIES ENTERED.

John Green (40) and Katherine Green (38), of Golden lane, were charged on remand with conspiring, with another man not in custody, to break and enter the Apex Shirt Factory, Little Ship street, and stealing wearing apparel to the value of £4 9s. 6d. John Green was also charged with conspiring with another man to break and enter Thompson's Shirt Factory, Francis street, and with stealing shirts, etc., valued at £20 12s. 4d.

William Mahon, no fixed address, was charged with conspiring with Green and another man to break and enter Thompson's Shirt Factory and stealing a quantity of apparel.

Bridget Gaynor, a forewoman at Thompson's Factory, gave evidence of finding the factory skylight broken and a quantity of goods missing on the morning of 1st November. She identified some articles produced in court as the property. Evidence was also given of some of the property being found in a pawnshop in Bride street.

The three defendants were remanded for a week.

DIVING-BOMBERS IN ACTION.

ATTACKING AT 300 M.P.H.

NEW EGYPTIAN SQUADRON.

ONE day's personal investigation has convinced me of the efficiency and accuracy of diving-bombing, the spectacular method of aerial attack on surface targets which first attracted public attention in the course of the combined sea-air exercises held in the North Sea towards the end of September, writes a correspondent. In this manœuvre bomb-sighting apparatus is of secondary importance; the aeroplane itself is aimed at the target and the missile is released when the aim is steady and the craft is plunging downwards at its highest attainable speed. Accuracy of aim is coupled with increased penetrative power of the bomb, which, at the moment of release, is already moving at the speed of the aeroplane from which it is launched.

Last week I was privileged to visit Bicester Aerodrome, the home of No. 33 Squadron of the Royal Air Force, and to watch, from the rear cockpit of the squadron commander's "Hart" biplane, diving-bombing practice on a target in the middle of the flying field. Weather conditions were imperfect. While the squadron was aloft thick cloud banks were swept across the aerodrome by an unexpectedly strong north-east wind, obscuring most of the sky from the view of watchers on the ground. Towards the end of the flying the clouds extended to within two thousand feet of the ground. Yet the bombs, launched from aeroplanes moving at a speed of some three hundred miles an hour, were dropped with amazing precision. On the last dive each of the twelve 'planes in the squadron dropped its bomb in a group of twenty yards' diameter.

The squadron ascended in close arrowhead formation, in three flights of four machines. Each flight flew in diamond fashion, with an aeroplane at every corner. Above the aerodrome the sky was clear and sunny; from the north-east the massed cloud battalions were moving perceptibly towards us. Keeping together in that perfect formation which looks simple enough from the ground to the inexpert eye, but is actually the reward of great skill in the handling of aeroplanes, the squadron climbed steadily. In a few minutes the machines were above the forerunners of the cloud army. At a height of 7,000 feet the order was given to open out. Port and starboard flights turned away in a lovely, effortless curve to get free space for the dive. The leading flight flew straight on for a few seconds, while the aeroplanes changed from diamond formation to line ahead behind the squadron commander. I looked round. In our three-companion craft the pilots were alone visible; their observers were lying prone in the bottom of the fuselage, ready to release their practice missiles—small bombs filled with stannic chloride, a chemical substance which makes a dense smoke on impact. Far below us, through a clear patch of sky could be discerned the aerodrome and the white landing circle, which was the day's target.

The squadron commander's machine tilted smoothly over towards the target and began to dive. I gripped two of the struts of the fuselage framework and stood up, looking over the squadron commander's shoulder. With a scream of streamlined wires the aeroplane tore downwards at an angle which I estimate to have been between seventy and seventy-five degrees from the horizontal. Below, the target grew swiftly larger. Now the aeroplane reached maximum diving speed. We moved steadily, as though on rails. The aeroplane felt as firm as a rock and impassible of deviation from its course, though had the target below us moved a small movement of the controls would have kept the attacking 'plane in position above it. At a height of about 2,000 feet the machine began to pull out on a level keel. Now one's whole frame provided an indication of the loads and stresses imposed on the flying machine. The sensation was one of greater and greater pressure, seeking to force the body through the floor of the fuselage. Gradually the effect lessened. The wires ceased to scream. Again we were climbing to prepare for a new attack.

300 M.P.H. THROUGH CLOUDS.

One by one the machines joined up in flight formation, and then made contact as a squadron. A few minutes more of steady climbing took us back again to seven thousand feet. By this time the clouds had invaded the aerodrome sky in mass, and soon after the climb began the squadron was lost to sight from the ground. The circumstance adds force to the second demonstration.

Again the squadron opened out. This time the target was visible only in glimpses through gaps in the clouds. The dive was made through the cloud banks—an unforgettable experience—but the results of the bombing were even better than on the first occasion. Except for a few moments at the beginning of the second climb, none of the skilled observers on the aerodrome saw the machines till they appeared diving at a terrific speed from the base of the cloud.

Much of the work of the diving-bombing squadrons must perforce remain secret; it is permissible to state that the present degree of achievement does not represent anything like the full possibilities of this form of attack. Against moving targets, such as warships, it is likely to be especially effective.

And here one of the fallacies of the "die-hard" school of naval propagandists, whose views are decidedly not shared in full by the better-informed and more up-to-date naval students, calls for reply. They are apparently under the impression that "zig-zagging" at speeds of 20 or 30 knots is sufficient to put the bomber off his aim. Their arithmetic is at fault. A vehicle moving at 300 miles an hour, capable of instant turning to keep a target within view is not incommoded by speeds so vastly disproportionate as 20 and 30 knots. I express entirely a personal opinion that the warship attacked by a diving bomber would be almost as secure if it were stationary; it might then have a slightly better chance of obtaining a direct hit on one of the 'planes moving towards it at a velocity of more than five miles a minute.

Actually, the modern naval strategist sees in the aeroplane a new and useful weapon as well as a potential menace. He recognises the power of air attack, and envisages its employment against hostile vessels as a material addition to his own striking power. For better or for worse, the aeroplane has become an essential part of the modern fighting fleet.

THE AEROPLANES.

A word of praise is due to the Hawker "Hart" biplanes flown by No. 33 Squadron. These fine craft set new standards of performance and endurance when they were first introduced to the Service nearly four years ago. Their speed, rate of climb, ease of control and trustworthiness are the joy of British Service pilots, and of the pilots of several foreign air forces. Power is supplied by a Rolls-Royce "Kestrel" 525 h.p. water-cooled engine; these motors are nowadays overhauled at intervals of 500 hours, which is sufficient evidence of their efficiency and dependability. The "veteran" of the squadron is a "Hart," which has flown more than 900 hours without overhaul. In that time it has covered at a conservative estimate some 110,000 miles. It is still "as good as new."

NEW EGYPTIAN SQUADRON.

A formation of "general purpose" military biplanes, acquired for work with the Egyptian Army Air Force, was officially inspected at Lympne Aerodrome by the Egyptian Minister in London, Dr. Hafez Afifi Pasha. In command of the squadron is Kaimakam Tait Bey, a squadron leader of the Royal Air Force, who has been seconded for duty with the Egyptian Government. Second in command is Bimbashi S. N. Webster, A.F.C., winner of the Schneider Trophy contest in 1927, when for the first time the British racing team broke the series of foreign governmental triumphs and laid the foundation for the succession of victories that, in 1931, ended by placing Britain in permanent possession of the "blue riband" of international air racing. They have with them seven Egyptian officers, an Egyptian radio operator, five British warrant officers and three Egyptian non-commissioned officers.

The Egyptian Army Air Force personnel arrived in England at the end of last month. Every one of them had had full instruction in aeroplane pilotage before reaching here, and the weeks since their arrival have been spent in familiarising them with their new machines.

The aeroplanes were built at the works in Manchester of the Avro Company, and are standard type 626 biplanes, powered each with a Siddeley "Cheetah" 277 h.p. air-cooled radial motor. Intended primarily for the advanced training of military pilots, the type 626 machine is ingeniously arranged for instruction in all of the branches of the flying art. Each of the craft purchased for the Egyptian force is designed to carry front and rear machine-guns, cameras for aerial photography and survey work, two-way radio equipment operating either on short or medium wavelengths, bombs, and comprehensive navigational gear which includes full equipment for night flying.

Thus equipped the machines will be fitted to perform any of the duties of army co-operation and "general purpose" military craft—the latter portmanteau phrase comprising a range of diverse duties—from ambulance work to desert patrol. Among their peace-time duties will be co-operation in anti-contraband measures, the survey and opening up of the south-western desert regions of Egypt, and aerial photography, upon the results of which will be prepared maps of hitherto poorly mapped areas.

Laden up to a total weight of nearly 2,700 pounds, the Egyptian biplanes reach a maximum level speed of 130 miles an hour and a service "ceiling" (the level, that is, at which the rate of climb has decreased to 100 feet a minute) at 16,800 feet. They can climb to 10,000 feet in 14 minutes.

More Avro training aeroplanes have been built than of any other make. Avro 504 biplanes will be familiar to the majority of war-time flyers. Recently, following three years' severe competitive trials, the Avro "Tutor" biplane—similar in main details of construction to the type 626—was chosen to replace the 504 type as the standard training aeroplane of the Royal Air Force. Three hundred "Tutors" have been ordered, and are now in course of construction.

ARMED RAID IN DUBLIN.

CHARGE AGAINST YOUNG MAN.

George Smyth (22), a labourer, whose address was given as Cherryfield Cottage, Templeogue, before Mr. Hannan in the Dublin District Court yesterday, was remanded in custody on a charge of conspiring with two others not in custody to commit armed robbery, with entering the tobacconist shop, 25 Dunville avenue; presenting a revolver at Miss Bridie Byrne, an assistant there, while the other two men robbed £6 15s. 1d. from the cash register, 300 cigarettes and tobacco, valued at about £3, the property of James Collins, owner of the shop. Smyth was also charged with receiving the property, with assaulting Miss Byrne, with having a revolver without a certificate, and with having one round of revolver ammunition when searched at Rathmines Police Station.

When charged and cautioned, Smyth said, "You are making a mistake."

Miss Byrne described how on Saturday night three men entered the shop. One, who was small, wore a black coat; another, the accused man, wore a fawn dust coat, and the third a brown tweed coat and cap. She did not see the third man's face, as he kept it turned away. The men were undisguised.

One of the men asked for cigarettes, and when she turned round after getting them two of the men had gone behind the counter, and the defendant was outside the counter with a gun in his hand. One of the men said that they were after the money, and told her not to give any alarm, but to open the cash register. She refused, and the man with the cap then took the money out of the register. The men also took the cigarettes and tobacco from the shelves and then left.

On Thursday, said the witness, she went with the detective in a motor car to Templeogue road, where there were about thirty men working. She pointed out the accused man. He was wearing a cap then, but when he had come into the shop he had been wearing a hat. She afterwards identified him at a parade in Rathfarnham Barracks.

Answering the Justice, the witness said that the revolver was not pointed at her in the shop. She did not see any arms in the possession of the other raiders.

In the dock defendant said he never used a gun in his life.

WOMAN MISSING SINCE 1907.

LIBERTY TO PRESUME DEATH.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE.)

An application was made in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday, by Mr. John A. Costello, K.C., with whom was Mr. J. C. Conroy (instructed by Mr. John Montgomery) on behalf of Mrs. Lucretia Margaret Kehoe, of 16 Anglesea road, Ballsbridge, Dublin, for a grant of letters of administration under the 78th Section of the Probate Act, of the estate of Kathleen Doyle, her sister, and for liberty to presume the death of Kathleen Doyle.

Mr. Costello said that Kathleen Doyle left her home, 23 Lower Fitzwilliam street, Dublin, on the 5th April, 1907, to attend Mass in Westland Row, and had never been heard of afterwards. She was about 22 years old at the time of her disappearance. Her father, Dr. Doyle, made inquiries through the police, and advertisements, and made efforts as far as human persistence could go, to find out where she was, but all efforts to trace her had failed.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne gave liberty to the applicant to take out a grant of letters of administration as applied for, and to state the death of Kathleen Doyle to the best of her information and belief.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT.

OWNERSHIP OF GOODS.

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

In the case of Messrs. Sharman Crawford and Co. against Mrs. Adeline Ryan for £47 6s., the price of goods sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant, an interpleader action was brought to decide the question of the ownership of goods that were seized by the Sheriff. The execution order was lodged with the City Sheriff, who seized the goods to satisfy the order at her former residence in Vernon avenue, Clontarf. The property that was seized was claimed by her son, Thomas J. Ryan, who pleaded that he had purchased the goods from his mother before the execution order was made. The Sheriff brought the interpleader action in order to ascertain who was the real owner of the goods.

The Judge decided that the property that was seized was owned by Thomas J. Ryan.

Mr. Alec Lynn (instructed by Mr. Victor Elyan) appeared for the plaintiffs. Mr. J. Devlin (instructed by Messrs. Joyce and Joyce) appeared for the claimant. Mr. Charles Murray appeared for the Sheriff.

Seven children were burnt to death and four more are expected to die at San Juan, Porto Rico, from burns received following an explosion of a toy film projector, the light for which was furnished by a candle which ignited the film.

INFANT'S BODY IN A CASE.

Dr. D. A. McErlean, Dublin City Coroner, assisted by a jury, yesterday, at the Morgue, opened an inquest into the death of a male infant, which had been found by police near the Broadstone railway station in an attaché case carried by Mary Ellen Bohan (36), an unmarried woman, of Annaduff, Drumsna, Co. Leitrim.

After evidence of identity had been given, Dr. J. P. Shanley testified that death was due to asphyxia, apparently induced by a narrow cord drawn round the neck. The Registrar (Mr. Joseph Maher) read a certificate that Bohan had been charged at the Dublin District Court with the murder of the child, and remanded. The inquest was thereupon adjourned sine die. Inspector P. Heffernan appeared for the Civic Guards.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY.

Sir John Moore : Monster Apples.

The Totalisator.

In spite of the depression caused by the economic war, the small fields which were the rule at Irish meetings during the summer months owing to the state of the ground, and the conservative tendencies of the Irish people, who are so very slow to adopt new ideas, the "tote" turnover has already reached the formidable total of £105,557. There are yet four meetings to be reckoned before the final figures for 1933 are available. These are Naas (to-day), two at Leopardstown and one at Limerick during Christmas week. Those meetings will, at least, bring the total up a few thousands higher, with the result that this year's turnover will show an increase over that of last year—an indication that the betting machine has come to stay.

The "tote" service has improved, and after three years many of those who were hostile to the idea of mechanical betting are now to be found at the window asking how to invest their money. Last year the "tote" gave £26,000 to the executive. Four Tote Plates of £50 apiece were given to different meetings. These were Dundalk, Claremorris, Tramore and Mallow, while Roscommon got a £30 stake.

A Monster Apple.

The apple orchards of Northern Ireland have been improved considerably during recent years, due in great measure to the modern methods of culture introduced by the Ministry of Agriculture. At the Ulster Horticultural Society's Show in Belfast this week the exhibits of "boxed apples" numbered 300 and weighed over seven tons, while the largest individual exhibit was a monster Bramley seedling, weighing 2lb. 1½oz. It was without blemish, and there were many others closely approaching it in size and of the highest quality. The magnitude of this crop suggests to a correspondent writing from Belfast that the trees which bore such big fruit must have been fertilised with H. G. Wells's "Food of the Gods." He also points out that Professor Morton, of Queen's University, referring, on the evening of the Show—a curious coincidence—to the laws of gravitation, mentioned Newton's experience in watching the fall of an apple from a tree and the profound ideas suggested by that simple incident. My correspondent thinks that, if an apple similar to the giant Belfast specimen had fallen on Newton's head, it would have been a terrible blow to science.

Sir William Orpen.

I see that Dr. Thomas Bodkin, Director of the National Gallery of Ireland and Honorary Professor of Fine Art in Dublin University, is giving two public lectures on "The Art of Sir William Orpen" in the Graduates' Memorial Building, Trinity College, on Thursday and Friday next, and I feel sure that he will lecture to crowded audiences. Sir William Orpen was the most brilliant of our Irish artists and his work will, undoubtedly, take rank with that of the great masters of the past. At the Royal Academy Exhibition in London last year a number of his works were exhibited, and to one observer at least their merit seemed to overshadow all the rest. I look forward with interest to seeing the pictures which Dr. Bodkin will throw on the screen—the lecture is being illustrated by lantern slides—and I look forward, too, to the learned criticism and evaluation which he will give, I feel sure, in abundant measure at the lectures. The Provost of Trinity College will take the chair at the meetings.

An Irish Pro-Consul.

I am glad to see that Irishmen are still to the fore in high positions in the British Government service. Last week I noticed that Sir Louis James Kershaw, K.C.S.I., had been appointed Deputy Under-Secretary of State for India, after holding the Assistant Under-Secretaryship of State since 1924. Graduating from Dublin University, after being at school at Methodist College, Belfast, he entered the I.C.S. in 1890 and soon earned promotion, being Secretary to Government for Eastern Bengal and Assam in 1905 and for Bihar and Orissa in 1912. He was appointed Secretary to the Indian Revenue Department in 1914 and Secretary to the Industrial and Overseas Department at the India Office in 1921.

My friend, Mr. J. E. W. Flood, C.M.G., who was recently over on a visit to Dublin, holds the office of Assistant Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, and was a brilliant classical scholar in his day, being University Student of Trinity College. Another friend, Mr. J. H. Macgowan, who has just left for America after a short holiday, holds the post of Commercial Counsellor to the British Embassy at Washington.

Madrigal Singing.

A musical event of unusual interest will be the lecture on madrigal singing, which will be given in Dublin by Mr. Steuart Wilson on next Wednesday. Steuart Wilson is one of the foremost authorities on madrigal singing, and was the founder of the well-known "English Singers." This madrigal party, which was formed after the War, created a great reputation for itself not only in England, but also on the Continent and in America, and it is largely responsible for the present vogue of madrigal singing. Mr. Wilson is already well-known in Dublin, both for his artistic singing and also as an adjudicator at the Feis Ceoil. He is a most able and witty speaker, whose lecture is sure to be well worth hearing. He has just finished a very successful tour in Australia, and this will be his first engagement on his return to Europe.

The "Good Companions," who are to illustrate this lecture, are also well-known in Dublin. They have already given two successful concerts, and this year won the Florence Culwick Cup for madrigal singing at the Feis Ceoil. They include several well-known Dublin singers, and have devoted themselves to the cause of madrigal singing for the last four years. On Midsummer's night they were heard singing madrigals in a lonely spot in the Dublin Mountains.

Meath Hospital's "G.O.M."

I met that grand old man of the Irish medical profession, Sir John Moore, striding along Baggot street yesterday at a speed which would put most young men of my acquaintance to shame. Sir John was qualified as long ago as 1868, and has been connected with the Meath Hospital for so many years that one hardly can imagine the place without him. He still is one of the most active physicians in Dublin. Despite his great age, he scorns to use motor, or even tram, cars when he can possibly get along on foot, and on the coldest day he may be seen braving the elements, wearing nothing more substantial than a light rainproof coat. When I saw him yesterday I was reminded of a good story that is told of the late Sir John Mahaffy and another stalwart of the medical profession—the late Sir Charles Cameron, who also lived to a ripe old age. At a dinner one night of the Corinthian Club, at which Sir Charles Cameron was in the chair, Mahaffy, when called upon for a speech, began his remarks with the following sentence: "Shortly after Saint Paul had written his Second Epistle to the Corinthians Sir Charles Cameron was born." Sir John Moore hardly can lay claim to such a record; but it is something to have been a practising physician for sixty-five years—and still to be going strong.

The King's Cup.

A correspondent writes:—"Your notice in the Irish Times, under the heading of 'King's Cup,' states that 'the Cup has not come from the Free State Government.' This is true. In all fairness, however, it should also have been stated that the Executive Council offered to give a cup to replace the King's Cup, won outright last year, but it was informed by the Fairyhouse Executive that they had already been offered a cup, and, therefore, did not accept the Government's offer."

COMMERCE AND THE UNIVERSITY.

MEETINGS AND LECTURES.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

THE outstanding event of the past week was the opening meeting of the University Commerce and Economics Society, when Mr. C. A. Preston's paper on "Trade Unionism" was discussed by some of the leading figures in the political life of the State. A large audience attended, and enjoyed a veritable "feast of oratory," excellent speeches being made by the Free State Minister for Industry and Commerce (Mr. Sean Lemass, T.D.), Senator Sir John Keane, Bart., and Mr. J. Dillon, T.D.—all from the political point of view—while Mr. Cecil Watters (Irish Secretary, N.U.R.) wound up the debate in a convincing and sincere speech, which showed the vital need to the working classes of the organisation of trade unions.

A notable visitor to the College this week is Canon Tissington Tatlow, D.D., Rector of All Hallows, Lombard street, London, and Chairman of the Student Christian Movement. Canon Tatlow, who is an old St. Columba's College boy, is a graduate of the University, and has been Secretary since 1902 and Chairman since 1929, of the Movement, which plays such a prominent part in university life all over the world. He is also an Honorary Canon of Canterbury and Honorary D.D. of Edinburgh. He will preach in the College Chapel to-morrow, and on Monday, at 4.30 p.m., in the Choral Society's rooms, will address a meeting of undergraduates, which has been summoned to make preparations for the visit next year of the Archbishop of York to the University. The Archbishop (Dr. Temple) proposes to hold a week's mission in College on the same lines as the mission he conducted at the University of Oxford in 1931, which had for its object the intellectual presentation of the Christian Faith to the undergraduate student body.

An interesting meeting, which is open to the public, has been planned by the D.U. League of Nations Society for Monday next, at 8 p.m., in the Regent House. A number of foreign residents in Dublin will give short speeches dealing with the political problems of their respective countries.

SOCIAL TRAINING.

A letter appeared in "T.C.D." which is of more than passing interest. Signed by the Rev. R. M. Gwynn, General Secretary, D.U. Social Service Society, it refers to a proposal to set up by the Board for the establishment of a "Diploma in Social Training," similar to those which have been obtainable at most English and American universities for many years past. Graduates and undergraduates who are interested are asked to interview the Rev. R. M. Gwynn in No. 22, T.C.D., at 1 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday next. It is to be hoped that there will be a very wide response to the appeal. The current number of "T.C.D." also contains an "operetta," in the best Gilbert and Sullivan manner, which for pungency and wit must be one of the best contributions made to that lively undergraduate paper within recent years.

The Historical Society will debate on Wednesday next the topic: "That despotism is a blind alley, leading nowhere," with Mr. Conal O'Riordan, the well-known author, in the chair. The subject for debate was selected by Mr. O'Riordan himself, and an interesting discussion may be expected. On Thursday night next Mr. T. H. C. McFall will read a paper to the Philosophical Society on "War and Peace," and the Rev. Canon A. A. Luce, F.T.C.D., will be one of the subsequent speakers. Next Monday night Mr. John Mercer, B.A. (Hon. Librarian) will read a paper to the Theological Society on "Christianity and Spiritualism," while on Tuesday night next Mr. V. J. P. Mealy (Sch.) (University Student) will read a paper to the Mathematical Society on "Transhuite Numbers." At the Experimental Science Association meeting on the same evening Professor Werner, Sc.D., will read a communication on "A Rapid Estimate of Water in Peat," while Miss R. Patten, M.Sc., will contribute a communication with the intriguing title "As like as two Peas." On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the G.M.B., Mr. J. J. Auchmuty (Sch.) (Mod.), B.A., will read a paper to the D.U. History Society on "Democracy and Dictatorship." On the same night the Neophyte Society will debate the motion, "That no war is just." On Tuesday next Herr Clissmann (Lecturer in German) will read a paper to the Modern Language Society on "Staat und Drama," while on Thursday and Friday next, in the Graduates' Memorial Building, Dr. Thomas Bodkin, Director of the National Gallery of Ireland, will lecture on "The Art of Sir William Orpen," the lectures being copiously illustrated by lantern slides.

At the Classical Society meeting last week Mr. W. B. Stanford, B.A. (Lecturer in Classics), read a paper on "Modern Greece"—a country in which he recently spent a lengthy holiday. Mr. Stanford is a Double Large Gold Medallist in Classical Ancient History, and also University Scholar last year.

The Sale of Work for the Dublin University Mission to Chota Nagpur, held last week, was a great success, and a large sum was realised for the mission. A Valedictory Service to the outgoing missionaries was held at St. Ann's Church, Dawson street, last night. The Archbishop of Dublin commissioned the missionaries, and the Rev. C. H. Hemming, M.A., preached the sermon.

TRINITY AND INDIA.

It is pleasant to record the promotion to high office of a Trinity man in an important branch of Indian service—that of Sir Louis Kershaw, K.C.S.I., to the post of Deputy Under-Secretary of State for India. Mr. Kershaw entered College from Methodist College, Belfast, in 1885, and passed into the I.C.S. in 1890. After service in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, he was appointed to the Industrial and Overseas Department of the India Office in 1921, and Under-Secretary of State in which Office he held by another Trinity man, Mr. J. E. W. Flood, C.M.G.

The Dublin University Boat Club successful meeting on the Liffey this afternoon, when Mr. Hilton Edwards, of the Gate Theatre actor-producer fame, delivered an address on "Production," which was followed by the performance of a Japanese play, entitled "Aoi No Uye," produced by Miss Gladys Hopkins.

The resignation of the very popular Reading Room Superintendent of the Library (Mrs. Nora Brown, née Hempenstall) was announced last week, and her place has been filled by the appointment of Miss Meredith, who is an Honours Graduate in Modern Languages.

The O'Sullivan Memorial Scholarship has been awarded to Mr. J. N. P. Moore. The Scholarship was founded in 1924 in memory of Professor A. C. O'Sullivan, M.D., S.F., T.C.D., and is awarded on the nomination of the Committee of the School of Physics.

The first meeting of the Scholars of the House this term will be held in the Museum Building on Wednesday next at 2 p.m. Several interesting matters are down for discussion, and a big meeting may be expected. The Hon. Secretary for the present year is Mr. John Watson (Sch.).

The Rugby Second XV. play College of Surgeons in the College Park this afternoon, while the D.U. Harriers meet Glasgow University Hare and Hounds at Islandbridge in a cross-country contest. The Hockey XI. meet Pembroke Wanderers to-day and Glasgow University at Londonbridge road next Monday. Motor cycling 'Colours" have been awarded to Messrs. A. H. Archer and G. M. Campbell, both of whom are "international" motor cyclists.

Election Situation : New Transport Policy : Bacon Quota Welcomed : Linen Improvement : Serious Water Famine : Loans to Farmers.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

THE election situation in the North, which was somewhat complicated early this week, has now cleared considerably. Many of the rumours that were prevalent have been either without foundation or have not materialised. The main fact is that there is likely to be very little change in the parliamentary representation, that the parties will return to the new Parliament at about the same strength, and that the Government will retain, if it does not increase, its substantial majority of twenty-two over all other parties. The Northern constituencies are so divided into Unionist and Nationalist areas that neither of these parties has any hope of success in a straight fight in a constituency assigned to the other. It is when a third candidate is introduced that there is a chance of altering the party representation. Therefore, the rumours in regard to the Nationalist seats this week were of more than usual interest. The intervention of the Republican candidates is likely to have one result—the loss of several Nationalist seats to the Unionists. Labour is making a bold bid to increase its representation, and it is not improbable that the Labour members may be increased from one to two. Several Farmers' candidates may go forward in Armagh and Fermanagh, but in other districts the threatened opposition of Farmers' candidates has been withdrawn, in view of the more favourable outlook for the pig marketing scheme. Northern farmers would like their land annuities reduced, but the majority are in favour of increased prices for their produce, and, if these were obtained, the annuities would present no great difficulty.

TRANSPORT POLICY.

The present unsatisfactory position of railway and road traffic in Northern Ireland has been engaging the attention of the Prime Minister and members of the Northern Government this week. Representatives of the three railway trade unions were received at Stormont Castle by the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance, and the Minister of Commerce. The deputation urged the desirability of the promotion of legislation to co-ordinate road and rail transport in the province, and it is understood that the case placed before the Prime Minister aimed at the aim of which is to promote the general prosperity of the railway and road transport concerns. The railways were represented at the conference. It is understood that they are not averse to a co-ordination scheme, and that certain modifications they might give it some support. All interests must be safeguarded—the merchants, road and rail transport concerns, and the travelling public, who, in the ultimate analysis, have to meet any additional charges. The control of road passenger traffic has been effected without any considerable inconvenience to the public, and there is no reason why the road goods traffic should not be regulated to the benefit of the whole transport system.

BACON QUOTA.

The decision of the British Government to limit the amount of bacon imported by them to 70 per cent. has given satisfaction to Northern farmers, pig-producers and curers. Northern bacon and pigs, which have had free entry to the British market, are likely to be more in demand, and the curtailment of foreign and Free State imports is calculated to put the Northern pig-marketing scheme upon a more satisfactory basis. The fact that there has been an expansion of 70 per cent. in the Northern pig industry in Great Britain during the last two years, and that Northern Ireland is a complete justification of the quota system and the Northern pig-marketing scheme, particularly as the reduction in the price of bacon to the consumers has not been reflected over the prices prevailing a year ago, and that Northern farmers and pig-producers, unlike those in the Free State, are able to take full advantage of the British market, is due to the fact that Northern Ireland is in the British fiscal system, that there is no imposed restriction between them and their natural market in Great Britain. An effort is being made to secure more satisfactory position for oats. The area under oats is grown extensively in the province, but it is felt that this area last year there were 270,000 acres under oats, but it is felt that this area could be greatly extended if some of the restrictions were placed upon the Northern Ireland county-fed oats entering the British market. During the War 455,000 acres of oats were grown in Northern Ireland, and it is believed that this figure could be reached again, and that Northern Ireland alone could supply the whole oat requirements of the United Kingdom.

PROGRESS.

The steady improvement in the linen industry is the most notable feature of the Northern industry. Two factors have been responsible for the recovery—first, the import duties imposed in Great Britain on foreign linen imports, and, secondly, the abandonment of the gold standard. As a result of the first, the imports of foreign linen declined in October to £23,812, against £41,440 in the corresponding month last year and £93,430 in 1931. Taking the ten months of this year, the total imports were only £219,371, compared with £325,099 in 1932 and £584,486 in 1931. The decline is steady and persistent, with corresponding advantage to the Northern Ireland linen trade, which is gaining a monopoly on the British market. The abandonment of the gold standard encouraged exports. The export of piece goods last month to the United States, which is the largest market for linen, increased to £156,589, or nearly twice the amount sent to America in October last year. If we compare the ten months' figures, there is an increase of nearly £250,000, at £1,302,036, over the amount sent in the same period last year. It will be interesting to see if this rate of advance will be maintained, now that sterling is above the dollar par rate instead of considerably below it, as it was early this year. An increase of prosperity in America would lead to more buying of Irish linen. The exports to Canada, China and Brazil also show substantial increases.

WATER FAMINE.

A serious situation has arisen in Bangor and other districts in North Down owing to a shortage of water. Drastic action has been taken by the Bangor Borough Council. The water supply to all houses, shops and business premises has been cut off and no water is available from this source for the building of new houses. Stand pipes have been erected in streets, and residents have to carry the limited supply available to their homes in buckets. The Borough Council a few years ago constructed a new reservoir at Ballysallagh, but apparently this is inadequate for the needs of the town. The deplorable state of the water supply will give an impetus to the movement in the North Down area for joining up with the Belfast Water Commissioners' ample supply from the Mourne Mountains. This is a work that should be undertaken without delay, so that Bangor and other districts may have a sufficient supply for the tourist season next summer. As a temporary arrangement, the Marquess of Dufferin has given permission to the Bangor Borough Council to use the water from the lake in his Clandeboye estate.

LOANS FOR FARMERS.

The improvement in agriculture which is expected to follow the various marketing and quota schemes, including the Pig Marketing plan, is likely to make a greater demand upon the Government Agricultural Loan schemes. As a farmer sees a profitable outlet for his labour and enterprise by increasing, for instance, pig-production, he will be inclined to borrow money and erect more buildings. Under the Government schemes farmers may borrow for almost any purpose. The amounts that can be borrowed vary from £50 to £1,000, according to the value of the holding, and repayment can be spread over twenty two years, at a rate of interest of 4½ per cent. Short-term loans can also be arranged for five years for minor land improvements, the erection of minor farm structures and loans for the purchase of live-stock. In addition to loans from the Government Loans Fund, farmers may obtain short-term loans from the banks under Government guarantee. Originally these were restricted to the purchase of live-stock, seed or fertilisers, but the scope has been extended to cover any purpose for which a farmer requires a short-term loan. The rate of interest on these loans is reduced from 4½ per cent. to 3 per cent. Again, farmers can get half the labour cost of carrying out field drainage works, fencing, making farm roads and similar improvements under the Unemployment Relief scheme.

CASTLE CONTROVERSY.

In the midst of modern political controversy, and in the discussion of up-to-date topics, it is refreshing to find newspaper correspondents in Belfast getting quite excited in an archæological controversy as to the best method of restoring Carrickfergus Castle. This historic building, dating from Norman times, is one of the best-preserved ancient buildings in these islands. Until quite recently it was under the control of the British War Office as an ordnance and ammunition store, but it has been handed over to the Northern Government for preservation as an ancient monument. The Ancient Monument Committee got the opinion of antiquaries, and have removed certain walls and modern additions to the castle in order to restore it to its mediæval condition, and so enable tourists and others passing through Carrickfergus to obtain a better view of the building. This is regarded as "vandalism" by some critics, who declare that it destroys the "military history in stone" revealed by the various additions to the original castle, including the prison used to house the prisoners in the "'98" rebellion. It is the general opinion, however, that it is time that some of the unsightly buildings round the castle were removed and the castle restored as an "ancient monument" in the best sense.

ON THE WIRELESS

Daily Programme Review.

(CONDUCTED BY OBBLIGATO.)

TO-DAY.

DUBLIN: Opera, "Romeo and Juliet" (Gounod), 7.

BELFAST: "Masterful Maggie," a County Down Comedy, 9.35.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: Variety, 8.

REGIONAL: "Matinée" Play for broadcasting," 9.15.

SCOTTISH REGIONAL: "Victorian Memories," 7.30.

BUDAPEST: Cigany Band and Hungarian Folk Songs, 9.15.

BERLIN: Pianoforte Recital by Walter Giesseking, 4.20.

AFTER a week of concentrated listening to fairly strenuous music, to-night's list of broadcast performances suggests a Saturday night relaxation. There is plenty of good music to be found in the programmes. For instance, a concert version of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" will be performed in the Dublin Studio to-night, and will be heard on the Dublin, Cork and Athlone wave-lengths at 7. This opera has been broadcast from the Dublin Station frequently, and, as before, will be under the direction of Dr. Vincent O'Brien. It is one of the best of the many operatic settings of Shakespeare's stories, which it follows as closely as an opera may do.

Ernest Hargreaves is the "Romeo" to Hilda Roberts's "Juliet," and James O'Neill will be the Friar. Well-known Dublin artists frequently heard in opera broadcasts supply the rest of the cast.

In the Daventry National programme at 7.30 a new Saturday night feature will be introduced. It is described as a topical supplement, made up of surprise items, and is entitled, "In Town To-night." This entertainment will vary each week with the personalities who happen to be "in town to-night."

The William Rees Concert, which is taking place in Manchester, will be heard from North Regional Station at 7.30. In this concert William Rees will conduct his own orchestra and the Manchester Philharmonic Choir. Included in the programme is the Symphony for Organ and Orchestra No. 1, Op. 52, by Guilmant, with G. D. Cunningham, whom we hear so often in recitals from Birmingham, at the organ.

Belfast is broadcasting Acts I. and II., and the finale of Act III., of the fairy opera, "Hansel and Gretel," by Humperdinck. This portion will be relayed from a concert arranged in co-operation with the Belfast Y.M.C.A. from the Wellington Hall to-night at 8.

TO-MORROW.

DUBLIN: Station Orchestra and Opera artists, 8.30.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: The Lener String Quartet, 5.45.

REGIONAL: London Symphony Orchestra, with Heddle Nash, 6.30.

SCOTTISH REGIONAL: The Waverley Male Voice Quartet, 10.5.

STRASBOURG: Comic Opera, "Chauson d'Amour" (Schubert-Berte), 8.30.

LANGENBERG: Octet in F (Schubert), 11 p.m.

BERLIN: Choral Concert of Sacred Music, 7.30.

THE music for to-morrow from Daventry National includes the Bach Cantata No. 180 ("Deck thyself in radiance holy.") There is a long list of first-rate musicians engaged for the work, which will be conducted by Stanford Robinson. At 5.45 the Lener String Quartet, who are so well known to the large number of chamber music lovers in Dublin, and have been heard so frequently here, will give a recital. This, too, will be heard from Daventry National.

All through the week's programmes one has noticed works of Schubert very much in evidence from one station or another, although music of this composer is rarely missing altogether. To-morrow (November 19th) is the anniversary of the death of Franz Schubert in 1828. He was the one great composer native to Vienna, " and was born in the district called Lichtenthal, at the house which is now numbered 54 of the Nussdorfer Strasse, on the right going out from Vienna." Sunday's programmes, therefore, reflect more of this much-loved composer's music. Chief among his works to be broadcast is a musical comedy, or comic opera, entitled, "Chanson d'Amour," from Strasbourg at 8.30.

Presumably, this opera ascribed to Schubert is something corresponding to the Schubert-Clutsam "Lilac Time." A broadcast of Schubert's Octet in F from Langenberg at the very late hour of 11 should be heard well, since the ether is less crowded at this time.

DUBLIN MURDER TRIAL

WITNESS FAINTS IN COURT.

CASE ADJOURNED UNTIL TO-DAY.

A CROWEDED court, with hundreds outside vainly seeking admission, characterised the fourth day's trial before Mr. Justice Meredith and a jury at Green Street Courthouse, Dublin, yesterday of John Fleming, aged 32, shop assistant, of 48 Carlingford road, Drumcondra, Dublin, who is charged with the murder of his wife, Ellen Fleming, at their home on the evening of Wednesday, 26th July last.

Mr. Martin C. Maguire, with Mr. Kevin Haugh (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted.

Mr. John J. Hooper (instructed by Mr. Liam Trant McCarthy, solicitor) was assigned as counsel for the defence.

The boy, John Berry (nephew of the late Mrs. Fleming) was recalled by the Judge and questioned as to the bolts on the back doors in No. 48 Carlingford road. He said those were carefully closed whenever the house was being left unoccupied.

JUDGE AND FINGER-MARKS.

Detective-Sergeant Mark Byrne, continuing his evidence from Thursday, said that, when searched, £4 4s. 9d. was found on the accused together with a pair of cycle clips and a leather case containing a Rosary and a receipt for a premium of £3 18s. 9d. paid on 2nd May in respect of a policy of £250 on the joint lives of the accused and Mrs. Fleming.

To Mr. Hooper, the witness said he got to 48 Carlingford road about 8.30 p.m. on 26th July and found Superintendent Rd. O'Connell there. Then, acting on instructions, he went to 128 Clontarf road and arrested the accused on the charge of murder without mentioning the name of the murdered person.

The witness, in cross-examination, said that there had been a number of robberies in the Drumcondra district, and he had been engaged investigating some twenty, but he would not class Carlingford road as one of the roads in which they occurred. In every case of house-breaking the police looked for finger-prnts, and, when found, they were taken. None were taken in connection with this case.

Mr. Justice Meredith—Why on earth did you not take finger-prints in a case like this?—As a general rule, they are taken.

If it is a general rule, why did you not consider it necessary to take them in this case, as in a case of burglary?—I would consider it important.

It is apparent that whoever left the kitchen last is the murderer, and, in that event, would it not be advisable to look for and take finger-prints?—Yes, my lord.

Mr. Maguire—This is not the officer who was in charge of the case.

Mr. Justice Meredith—I am not suggesting that he was. I was only asking him as to what was the general practice. He was in twenty cases of house-breaking this year, he says. In how many of those did he take finger-prints to help his investigation?

Witness—Perhaps, one; and, to find one, you would have to be lucky. If there were finger-prints to be taken I would take them.

PATHOLOGIST'S EVIDENCE.

Dr. John McGrath, State Pathologist, gave the results of his examination of various articles of clothing, etc., sent him on 29th July for examination. There were were no bloodstains on a soft collar, a tie, or a pair of shoes. There were six spots on the left side of a waistcoat and three on the right. There were none on the braces or socks, but on the trousers he found nine small spots of human blood on the front of the left leg, below the knee. On the shirt there were four small spots, some four inches from the collar-band; seven on the left cuff, and one on the left sleeve, about five inches below the shoulder. There were about thirty small spots scattered over the front of the left sleeve of the coat from the elbow to the wrist. All the stains were of human blood.

To the Judge, he said that the spots seemed to have got on the clothes from sprinkling or splashing. The spots on the cuff of the shirt could have been caused while the coat was on, but the spot on the upper part of the shirt sleeve could only have been caused when the coat was off.

In examination by Mr. Haugh, Dr. McGrath said that one of the spots on the coat was through a button hole. The bone part of the button was clean, but there was a blood spot in the holes made for the thread. From that he drew the inference that some attempt had been made to wipe the button or clean it. That also applied to spots on the coat sleeve and on the trousers below the knee. Those garments looked as if some attempt had been made to clean them.

Mr. Justice Meredith asked if the attempt seemed to have been determined.

Dr. McGrath said that it was just a superficial wipe. He only saw this attempt on garments where stains could be seen and where they would be a disfigurement. There was no trace of any wiping on the clothes that would be ordinarily concealed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hooper, Dr. McGrath said that he got the garments on July 29th, but did not examine them until the 31st. Unless blood was very recent, practically wet, it was impossible to tell the age of bloodstains. Once that had dried, which they would have done in less than an hour, it did not make any difference when they were examined.

THE SCENE IN THE HOUSE.

Superintendent Richard O'Connell, replying to Mr. Maguire, said that he visited 48 Carlingford road at 8.12 on the evening of July 26 and made an examination of the house. He saw the body lying in the kitchen. The face was besmeared with blood and the head was lying in a pool of blood, which apparently came from the wounds in the head. Dr. Shiel and Father Redmond were in the room where the body was. The witness noticed a number of wounds on the head. He gave certain instructions to the doctor and interviewed people outside. He also made a close inspection of the premises at the back, and told Sergeant Byrne to go to Clontarf.

Mr. Maguire asked if the witness had examined the house for finger-prints, and the witness replied that he had. It was one of the things in his mind from the outset, but he could see nothing to indicate finger-prints. Next day he also looked for prints, but could see none.

Mr. Justice Meredith—You could not see them with the naked eye as you would look for them in a case of burglary?—No, and if we see them the expert comes along and examines the indications very carefully with the aid of powder and other means.

Mr. Justice Meredith asked why the outer door was not taken off its hinges and sent for examination.

Superintendent O'Connell replied that on a very rough surface, like that of the outer door, it would be very difficult to get finger-prints. On a polished or painted surface it would be different.

Mr. Hooper, cross-examining, asked: "Was it not obvious to you that whoever killed Mrs. Fleming went out the back way?"

"It was quite obvious," replied the witness. He said that, in his opinion, blood from the wounds of the murdered woman must have covered the hands and coat cuff of the assailant.

In the matter of fingerprints, the Superintendent said they had often played a very important part in bringing home guilt to an offender, and, if found, were always carefully preserved until photographed on the scene of a crime. He had looked for blood marks or stains, but had not found any.

With about forty Guards, continued the witness, he had for three or four days carried out an intensive search for the missing hammer. This search had included all the gardens of premises in Carlingford road, Hollybank road, the adjoining terraces and lanes, up to Moibhi road in the Glasnevin direction, all the waste spaces about there, gardens in Richmond road, Fairview; the Tolka River, the foreshore along the bull Wall out to and even beyond the low water mark.

YOUNG WOMAN WITNESS.

THE TALK OF MARRIAGE.

Miss Rita Murtagh was the first witness called when the Court resumed after the luncheon adjournment. She answered the preliminary questions in a low voice. As her examination by Mr. Maguire proceeded, however, her emotions overcame her frequently. She uttered loud sobs occasionally, and seemed to be on the verge of a break down at any moment. Mr. Justice Meredith at one period said gently to her: "Try and be calm, Miss Murtagh; everyone has great sympathy with you."

Miss Murtagh gave her age now as twenty years. She had been employed in the Central Cafe, D'Olier street, for some years up to March last. It was there, four years ago, that she first made the acquaintance of the prisoner, John Fleming.

Did you become friendly with him?—Yes.

Did he take you out?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Meredith—How long after he first met you was it before he took you out?—About a year. He used to come to the cafe for his luncheon every day, except Wednesday. He had been about twelve months coming in before he took me out first, in October, 1929.

In reply to counsel's question, Miss Murtagh said that Fleming used to take her to the pictures, the theatres, various hotels and restaurants, and for an occasional walk. They had been a couple of times round Whitehall for a walk.

Fleming told where he worked—at Hickey's, in Earl street—and that he lived with his aunt in 48 Carlingford road.

Mr. Maguire—Did you ever accompany him to 48 Carlingford road?—I did.

When did you first go there?—Early in January, 1930. We got there about 9 p.m. He opened the door and let me in. He told me that when we were married we would live there, and he showed me over the house. There was no one else in it at the time.

Did you believe him?—Yes.

Had he discussed the subject of marriage with you before that?—Yes.

At this point the witness broke down completely, and when asked by the Judge if she would like to go to the waiting room for a while sobbed, "Yes, I want to go." She was then taken out by Miss O'Brien, the Probation Officer, and her mother.

"DESPERATE TALK."

Mrs. Margaret Murtagh proceeded to give evidence. She said she lived at 31 Kirwan's Cottages, and had known the accused for a year-and-a-half. He had called at her house on three or four occasions, and was there on the Saturday before the 26th July. On that day he asked for her husband, who was out at the time. He then said, "This is desperate talk about me being a married man. I am terribly upset about it." He put it all down to lies, said the witness, who added that she was terribly upset, too.

Mr. Haugh—Did he say anything about your daughter, Rita?—He said that as far as he was concerned he would marry my daughter Rita in August. I said that it was a question for her father. He then left, and said that he would call back to see the "boss." The witness added that she had noticed nothing the matter with her daughter at this time.

Mr. Hooper did not cross-examine.

To the Judge, the witness said that she did not know of her daughter's condition until the Saturday after the murder.

COUNSEL'S SUGGESTION.

There was a slight delay while the Court waited for a witness. During this interval Mr. Maguire said that Rita Murtagh was hysterical and thought people were glaring at her. He suggested that the court be cleared of people who had nothing to do with the case until she had finished her evidence.

Mr. Hooper said that the trial must be public.

Mr. Justice Meredith said that he would adjourn the Court until a witness was available. He expressed the hope that anyone, who had no real business there, would not continue to be present.

At this stage Thomas Murtagh, the girl's father, arrived in Court and was examined. He said that he had seven children, of whom Rita was the eldest, and he had known Fleming for twelve months before 26th July. Fleming came to the house on several occasions and went out with witness's daughter. When he went to the house he did not stay very long—about ten or fifteen minutes. He remembered two occasions on which Fleming had asked him for permission to take Rita out to an all-night party or dance. He did not mind her going, as he knew with whom she was going.

Continuing, witness said that on the Saturday before 26th July he met Fleming in Stoneybatter, and they went into a public-house for a drink. Fleming said to him that it was a terrible rumour about his being a married man, and put it down to jealousy. He said that he had an "aunt keeping house for him," and that he took her out for a walk occasionally. Fleming also said, "We have never been had friends," and the witness replied, "No, and we never will be if you can prove to me you are a single man." Fleming said he suspected somebody on the road where he was living of spreading the rumour, but was not sure, adding that he was working on a plan, and would be sure of the person in a day or two. The witness said, "I will go back to the person who said that you are a married man to try and find out where the information came from." Fleming said that would help him greatly, and that the witness would have word from him in a day or two. The witness never saw Fleming again until after Fleming's arrest.

VISIT TO A JEWELLER.

David Ginsberg, an assistant in the jewellery establishment of Messrs. Benson, O'Connell street, identified Fleming as a man who entered the shop accompanied by a young woman on 6th February last, and selected a wedding and engagement rings. The rings were slightly too large for the girl, and the witness entered in the day book a description of them and their size. He asked the accused for his name and understood it to be Lemming, and, as the accused did not correct him, he wrote it in that form. The witness asked for a deposit on the rings. Fleming said that he would not leave a deposit, but would call for the rings when they were properly fitted on the following day and pay for them. Fleming did not do so.

When the evidence of this witness had concluded, Mr. Maguire said that a doctor had seen Rita Murtagh and thought she would be able to give evidence in half-an-hour. Mr. Maguire asked his Lordship to renew his appeal to the public to leave if they had not actual business in the Court.

Mr. Hooper—I must object to that. This is a very serious case, and must be heard in the full presence of the public.

Mr. Justice Meredith said that that being so, he would not say anything, and would adjourn the Court for half-an-hour.

MISS MURTAGH RECALLED.

An hour elapsed before Miss Murtagh was deemed fit to be brought back to Court. Before that was done, a number of women were moved out of a small gallery overlooking the witness table and counsels' seats. With Dr. Sheil on one side and Miss O'Brien on the other, Miss Murtagh was accommodated with a seat behind counsel for the prosecution. In that position her back was towards the dock, in which Fleming sat, and also towards the main gallery, in which the majority of the public were.

Mr. Maguire asked that the witness might be allowed to give her evidence from that position.

Mr. Hooper raised the objection that such an application was without precedent. Miss Murtagh should give her evidence from the chair on the witness table in the ordinary way. It would be improper for the witness to be examined or cross-examined with people sitting beside her.

Mr. Justice Meredith asked Mr. Hooper if he could refer him to any case in which it had been decided that a witness could only give evidence from a particular seat in a Court.

Mr. Hooper said that his submission was that, in accordance with established rules in their Courts and in the Courts of the country from which they took their procedure, and in the Courts of any other country of which he had heard, the witness should give evidence from the recognised witness box or witness table.

Mr. Justice Meredith said that the witness was under the impression that people were staring at her, and it was very trying.

Mr. Hooper said it would be very trying for him to attempt to cross-examine Miss Murtagh in the seat that she now occupied. If she were allowed to give evidence from that position he could make a similar application with regard to the accused or any witnesses he might call.

"Try, like a good child," said Mr. Justice Meredith to Miss Murtagh, "if you can come to the witness table. You have already given your evidence in the District Court."

Mr. Maguire said that Miss Murtagh had only been partly examined in the District Court.

During the discussion Miss Murtagh was weeping, and when the Judge spoke to her she sobbed loudly.

This caused Mr. Justice Meredith to remark that it seemed as if Miss Murtagh would be unable to give her evidence any better in one place than another. He suggested, however, to Mr. Hooper that, as the obvious purpose of having the doctor and the probation officer alongside was to ensure that Miss Murtagh would not feel too uncomfortable, her examination in the seat behind counsel might be allowed.

Mr. Hooper insisted on his objection that the witness should take the recognised seat in the witness chair on the witness table.

JUDGE'S RULING.

Mr. Justice Meredith then said that he would rule on the point, and Mr. Hooper could carry the matter elsewhere if so advised. He ruled that the witness chair or seat was where the witness sat in court.

Mr. Maguire proceeded with his examination of Miss Murtagh. On the suggestion of his lorrship, this examination was not made in chronological order, but passed from the circumstances under which she had made Fleming's acquaintance to incidents which happened on the Saturday preceding the crime at 48 Carlingford road.

She said that on that Saturday she met Fleming by appointment at 8 p.m. in Manor street. He said he had come to see her father, and she conveyed a message to her father. She next rang Fleming up at about noon on Monday and met him at the Parnell Monument. They went to O'Brien's Hotel in Parnell street. She asked him what "Daddy" had said to him on Saturday, and he said her "daddy" was quite pleased, and he added that he would feel very sorry for anyone that would do any harm to her, so far as her "daddy" was concerned. She then arranged to meet him on Wednesday (26th July) at her home at 6.30 p.m.

Some weeks before that he had told her he had purchased a house in Galway. She gave birth to a baby boy on September 22nd, of which John Fleming was the father. She had kept company with Fleming during 1930 and 1931, and there were intimate relations between them in 1932. She went to 48 Carlingford road on a date last year and stopped there, and was visited in the room by John Fleming.

Here the witness again broke down, and it was some minutes before her examination could again be undertaken.

When she recovered she gave details of the visit to the jeweller's shop in March last with Fleming. There they selected an engagement ring for fifteen guineas and a wedding ring for £2 10s. She tried on the rings, but they did not fit, and Fleming said he would call for them next day. She never got them. About a week after the visit to the jeweller's she asked him when she might expect them and he said he had to get some money from the bank. In January last she told him about her condition and he told her it was always his ambition to have children, and that they could be married before Lent.

She was first in 48 Carlingford road in the beginning of 1930, and spent two nights there in August of last year. During those visits she had seen women's clothing in the house, including a fur coat, but she never met any woman there, and did not know that Fleming was married. In March, 1932, she was in hospital having her tonsils attended to and Fleming visited her there. He told her that his aunt was leaving the house, and was going to live in the country, and that they could get married as soon as she had gone. He often told her that his aunt was leaving the house. He also said that he had written to John Berry's aunt to come to Dublin and see about a position for Berry. Later he said the aunt had arrived, and had got a position for Berry in Mooney's, and that Berry would live in in the job.

When she first told Fleming that her father had heard he was a married man on the Thursday before the tragedy he laughed and said that there was another man named Fleming living on the road.

WITNESS FAINTS.

Mr. Hooper cross-examined the witness as to the circumstances under which she first made Fleming's acquaintance, and as to whether it commenced with a mere flirtation when she was serving his luncheons to him as an ordinary customer. She agreed that this was so, and that this continued for about a year before she consented to walk out with him. They had become so intimate in 1932 that she would have liked to marry him, and in January of this year she told him they would have to get married. Prior to 1932 it was Fleming himself who always mentioned marriage to her, and he did that repeatedly.

Mr. Hooper—Did you ever hear it suggested before July last that Fleming was a married man?—No.

Was it ever suggested even as a joke?—No.

When pressed for further details as to their intimacy, Miss Murtagh burst into a fit of loud sobbing, and the Judge said that she should be taken out of court into the air.

As she was being assisted from her seat she fainted, and had to be carried out.

David Ginsberg was recalled, and said he thought the woman who had just been carried out was the woman who was in Messrs. Benson's shop with Fleming in March last.

The Court adjourned for a short interval in the expectation that Miss Murtagh would recover sufficiently to finish her evidence.

The judge and jury returned to court in half an hour, but the proceedings had again to be adjourned, as Dr. Shiel reported that Miss Murtagh was unconscious.

On resuming after another half-hour, the doctors who were attending Miss Murtagh stated that she was still unable to undergo further cross-examination, and accordingly the further hearing of the case was adjourned until 10.30 this morning. Subsequently Miss Murtagh regained consciousness.

It is expected that the case will conclude to night at a late hour, probably midnight.

IRISH NEWS IN BRIEF.

Centenarian's Death.—Maria Doherty, aged 100, of Killeshandra, was found dead in bed yesterday. She resided alone. Portion of the bed and house caught fire, caused, it appears, by a lighted candle, which she kept in her room at night. At the inquest, which was held by Dr. Stuart, a verdict was returned "that death was caused by smoke fumes."

185th Conviction.—At the Drogheda District Court yesterday, before Justice Goff, Ellen Keogh, of no fixed address, was charged with begging in West street. Asked if she had anything to say for herself, defendant replied: "This is my first time." Presentation.—An interesting function took place at the Broadstone (Dublin) branch of the Great Southern Railways yesterday, when a presentation was made to Miss May Eustace on the occasion of her leaving the company's service. The presentation, which took the form of a portable wireless set, was made by Mr. A. Harrison, of the departmental accounting section, who expressed the regret of the staff at Miss Eustace's departure, and wished her every good luck in her new appointment. Miss Eustace suitably responded.

United Irish Women.—The United Irish Women (Castletown Branch) held their annual dance in St. Fintan's Hall, Mountrath, last Wednesday. It was a most enjoyable affair, and the attendance, which included several visitors from neighbouring counties, was even better than last year. The dance was held in connection with the Home Industries Show, held in Castletown on March 17 each year. The arrangements were excellently carried out by Mrs. T. H. Carter (president) and Miss Chris. Gorman (hon. secretary), ably assisted by the members of the committee.

ARMED RAID SEQUEL.

POSSESSION OF A RIFLE.

HEAVY SENTENCE AT WEXFORD.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

WEXFORD, Friday.

THE story of a raid by masked men, one of whom was armed with a rifle, was told by an aged man, who lives alone a few miles outside Enniscorthy, at Wexford Circuit Court, when two young men—Patrick Connors and Alexander Leary, both of Killybegs—were charged with breaking into shops in rural areas, stealing goods, and stealing a .22 rifle and ammunition from a fishing hut. They were further charged with conspiracy.

Connors pleaded "not guilty" to all counts, which included being in possession of a firearm without a certificate. Leary entered a plea of guilty in the indictments against him.

Robert Swaine gave evidence in the charges against Connors of being awakened late at night last August by a noise. He observed a flash lamp at the window, and a voice called out:

"Open the door; I want to get in." A rifle shot followed, and the glass in the window was broken. Witness then saw a bullet mark two or three feet over the head of his bed.

The door was pushed open and two masked men entered, one having a rifle and the other a flash-lamp.

HOUSE SEARCHED.

The raiders searched the house, and then the man carrying the flash-lamp ordered him out of bed. They continued their search, and found a cheque for £3, 2s. 4d. in cash, a razor and a penknife.

Annie Murphy, Tinnacross, and Margaret Carlan, Coolnahorna, gave evidence of their shops having been broken into in May and June and tobacco, cigarettes, fruit, chocolate, soap and other goods taken.

Charles J. Lett deposed that his fishing hut on the River Slaney was broken into last June and a .22 rifle, some ammunition, fishing tackle, and bread and cheese were taken.

Mr. J. L. Esmonde, who (instructed by Mr. H. J. Frizelle) appeared for Connors, applied for a direction.

Judge Devitt, having reviewed the evidence, directed the acquittal of Connors.

In the firearms charge Connors was found guilty.

Leary was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment, with a stay on condition that he entered into recognisance to keep the peace for five years, and would reside with his aunt for that time.

MISSING RIFLE.

This morning, when Connors was put forward for sentence, the Judge said that he understood that there was a .22 rifle at large in the county, and he asked the accused man if he would return it.

The accused man replied that he would.

In the afternoon the judge was informed that the rifle had been recovered by the Guards.

The Judge said that he had made up his mind on the previous evening to give the accused man seven years' penal servitude on the count of having a rifle with intent to endanger life and property. He had decided to reduce that to five years. On the count of having the gun without a firearms certificate he said that if the accused man had not disclosed the whereabouts of the rifle he would have given him two years, but he was reducing it to twelve months, with hard labour. Both sentences would run concurrently.

Trinity College and Ireland.

In Convocation of the National University this week a speaker remarked that Trinity College was patronised by the "extremes" of Irish politics. "The extreme Republicans," he said, "glory in Trinity College, and so do the extreme Unionists." For the speaker this was a "strange" circumstance, but is it really strange? Through the long history of Trinity College, Dublin, her sons have held many views on national politics, but all have shared two qualities—idealism and thoroughness. For three and a half centuries she has been a home of intellectual inquiry and of clear thinking. These virtues shine in her greatest sons, Berkeley and Burke; they still inform her metaphysical teaching, and they have distinguished her most successful periods of classical scholarship. The Trinity College mind takes kindly to an ideal, and, once satisfied of its worth and necessity, is prepared to pursue it in action, even at the cost of sacrifice. In the past and at this hour the grandeur and progress of the British Empire have furnished a ruling ideal for Trinity College. Republicanism also can be a high ideal, and, as a high ideal, Trinity College has found room for it. Nihil humani a se alienum putat. So it may well be true that some Republicans, like most Unionists, "glory in Trinity College."

The speaker in Convocation of the National University was grieved that the Republicans who are attracted to Trinity College have little, if any, contact with the Republican policy of Mr. de Valera's Government. The explanation, in the light of Trinity College's philosophy of life, is not difficult. Mr. de Valera's policy may pursue an ideal, and certainly the costs of the economic war are on a heroic scale; but in other respects his campaign seems to have been planned with an eye to the slightest possible measure of spiritual sacrifice and to the largest measure of political success without political risk. In former days Irish rebellion was ready to put its fate to the touch, to win or lose it all. To-day Mr. de Valera seeks his republic on conditions. One is that, if the Irish people proclaim a republic, "the British Government will not quarrel with them"—that there must be "no threat other than that of loss of the advantages of membership of the British Commonwealth." Another condition is that the British Government shall take no steps to protect Northern Ireland in her resistance to an all-Ireland republic. Is it surprising that this carefully-guarded policy is as little welcome to generous Republicans as to generous Unionists?

Trinity College tells her sons that causes, once seriously undertaken, demand a high loyalty. Such loyalty adorns the really great causes and helps to redeem those which are unpractical and wild. Loyalty to a republican ideal, if it is to be worth anything, must be single-minded and unconditional. The British Commonwealth of Nations claims a like loyalty, and will not be content with less. No political party in the Free State can hope to make a mere marriage of convenience—much less a "companionate marriage," in the American style—with the British Commonwealth. If she is to remain in the Commonwealth, the Free State must take a proper pride in the whole family's affairs, and must rejoice in her own multiplied opportunities of service. She must co-operate in the great causes of peace and civilisation which are the Empire's common goal. Hitherto an unpleasant comparison has been possible between Mr. de Valera's guarded republicanism and the United Ireland Party's guarded acceptance of the Commonwealth. That party realises that the Free State's future—if she is to have any future—lies within the Empire, but it lingers shivering on the brink and fears to launch away. Therefore, we welcome the new note which we find in Mr. Frank MacDermot's latest letter. Ireland's problems, he says truly, can be overcome only by "whole-hearted acceptance of effective independence within the Commonwealth." Here at last are patriotism and wisdom; for the Irish people understand real devotion to a cause, but have no respect for mere chaffering in the political market. At heart the Free State shares the philosophy of Trinity College—that name which, if we may transfer Burke's compliment, "keeps the name of this country respectable in every other."

M. Litvinoff's Mission.

President Roosevelt's decision to recognise Soviet Russia was announced in Washington yesterday, and ambassadors will be exchanged without further delay. M. Litvinoff has been in Washington since the beginning of the present month. He has been engaged in negotiations with the President and high officials of the State Department, and it seems that they now are satisfied with the assurances which he has given to them. According to a statement from Washington, letters have been exchanged between President Roosevelt and the Russian Minister, dealing with such matters as propaganda, religious freedom and economic espionage. The Soviet has agreed to waive all claims for compensation arising out of the Siberian expedition. Various other problems have been discussed during the last few weeks, and the State Department is satisfied that normal relations can be resumed with Moscow without undue risk. M. Litvinoff has conquered the last stronghold of bourgeois recalcitrance, and Washington's decision to recognise the Soviet will be a proud feather in his cap. Sixteen years ago the whole civilised world was horrified by the news that the Russian Bolsheviks had murdered the Tsar and his family in circumstances of the most revolting cruelty. Shortly afterwards several attempts were made to overthrow the Soviets, but with the passage of the years the Bolsheviks merely consolidated their position, and one by one the other nations decided to make the best of a bad business. Only the United States refused to budge. Washington insisted that there could be no diplomatic recognition of the Bolshevist tyranny, and, from Wilson to Hoover, successive Presidents were firm in their resolve. Why has President Roosevelt adopted a new policy? The answer is to be sought in Japan, who has decided to build a big navy, to maintain her army at the highest pitch of efficiency, and to establish a virtual hegemony in the Far East. The only Power that can do anything to check her progress is Russia, and the politicians of the White House are wise in their generation. They cannot contemplate without the gravest misgivings a Japan that will be supreme in the Pacific. The "open door" in China is a cardinal point of American policy, and Russia is the only nation that can help to keep it ajar. For that reason President Roosevelt has recognised the Soviet. Time alone will tell whether or not he is right.

The British Post Office.

Last year the British Post Office introduced a system of "reply cards," enabling business firms to despatch to their customers unstamped postcards which could be sent through the post without prepayment. In this way the firms were relieved of the need to enclose stamped cards, and were liable to the Post Office only for those cards which were used by their customers. This system has worked admirably, and at a luncheon at Sheffield Sir Kingsley Wood announced that more than nine thousand licences had been issued already to firms that had decided to take advantage of it. He proposes now to extend the same system to telegrams. In future firms that are registered on a special list will be able to send "reply paid telegrams" without prepayment. Special telegraph forms will be issued which will be accepted by the Post Office without any payment by the sender, and the actual charges incurred by the licensee will be collected periodically by means of credit accounts. The new service will come into operation at the beginning of next year. Since Sir Kingsley Wood became Postmaster-General the services of the British Post Office have been improved enormously. The telephone service is yielding a greatly increased income; air mails have been developed in a most satisfactory manner, and the amount to the credit of the Post Office Savings Bank is, approximately, £320,000,000. It is of interest to note that, in spite of the general depression, there are one million more "live" accounts in the Post Office Bank to-day than there were in 1912, and that the average balance to the credit of its nine and a half million depositors is fifty per cent. greater than it was twenty years ago.

Floating Aerodromes.

A fast ocean liner takes approximately five days to steam its way from America to Europe. The journey, in the view of the United States Government, is just four days too long; and it is planning a 24-hour air service between the two continents. It proposes to construct five "seadromes," or glorified landing stages for aircraft, in the middle of the Atlantic. Every "seadrome" will be more than a thousand feet long, more than 300 feet wide, and 100 feet in height. The landing stage will form the roof of the edifice, and underneath will be "decks," with hangars and a hotel. The "seadromes," therefore, will be by far the largest man-made things that ever have floated on the sea, and it might be expected that the incidence of storms would present a difficult problem. Their inventor, however, claims to have provided against everything. They will be supported by twenty-eight buoyancy tanks apiece, floating 100 feet beneath the water-level; cast-iron columns will join these tanks to the main structure, and will be continued another 100 feet downwards, where they will be connected with the ballast chambers. Finally, the whole "seadrome" will be anchored to the bottom of the sea by cables—long cables they must be—fastened to a 1,500 ton weight. Every consideration will be paid to the needs of aircraft: landing will be made easy by devices which will head the "seadrome" invariably into the wind, and directional radio-beams will enable the wanderers to find their way. It is an ambitious scheme—perhaps, too ambitious even for modern engineering.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin, made with short full sleeves to the elbow, with a train from the hem of the skirt. She wore an old family veil of rose point lace, mounted on ivory tulle, held by a twisted head-dress of silver and pearls, and carried a bouquet of pink roses, white heather and lilies of the valley. The five bridesmaids—Miss Marcella Willis Price, a cousin of the bride; Miss Betty and Miss Molly Dupree, also cousins of the bride; Miss Cynthia Ellis and Miss Mary Amsler—all wore dresses of gladioli pink panne velvet, made with long fitting sleeves in simple bodices, and with sashes of the material ending in a bow at the backwaist. FIANNA FAIL AND THE NORTH.

STATEMENT BY MR. DE VALERA.

NO INTERFERENCE IN THE ELECTIONS.

POSSIBILITY OF THREE-CORNERED CONTESTS.

NOMINATION DAY ..... NOVEMBER 20.
POLLING DAY ..... NOVEMBER 30.

THE announcement by Mr. de Valera last night that Fianna Fail will not put forward candidates at the forthcoming general election in Northern Ireland disposes of the rumours that have been in circulation as to the party's intention.

Fianna Fail's view is that the first step towards national unity is to get substantial agreement amongst those opposed to partition in Northern Ireland upon a common policy for that area, and, when a policy of the kind is determined, Fianna Fail will do its utmost to co-operate in making it effective.

In Belfast it is believed that the nomination of candidates by the extreme Republicans in divisions which have had Nationalist representatives may lead to Unionists nominating candidates there, with the possible result of the loss of a number of seats held by Nationalists in the last Parliament.

Mr. Joseph Devlin's decision with regard to the Nationalist representation of the Central Division of Belfast is not yet known, but it will probably be announced at a Nationalist Convention to be held to-morrow afternoon.

MR. DE VALERA'S STATEMENT.

"Fianna Fail has no intention of putting forward candidates in the Six Counties in the coming elections," Mr. de Valera said in an interview to Press representatives in Dublin last night.

"Although the problem of partition and the policy to be adopted to bring it to an end as speedily as possible, are matters of supreme importance to Nationalists in every part of Ireland, it is a fact that the political conditions and circumstances in the Six Counties are to-day very different to those in the twenty-six. These differences cannot be ignored in framing the general national policy.

"Accordingly, it is the view of Fianna Fail that the first step towards national unity is to get among those opposed to partition in the Six Counties substantial agreement upon a common policy for that area. Once such a policy is determined Fianna Fail will do its utmost to co-operate in making it effective.

"Fianna Fail has never attempted to force its views upon the Nationalists of the Six Counties. Its aim is to consolidate the Nationalist forces—not to divide them.

"The views I expressed four and a half years ago at the time of the previous elections," Mr. de Valera concluded, "remain unaltered. Nothing has occurred in the interval to change them or to lessen in any way my belief in the need for unity and an agreed policy."

STATEMENT OF MARCH, 1929.

The views expressed by him four and a half years ago, to which Mr. de Valera referred last night, were as follow:—

Mr. Eamon de Valera, interviewed in reference to the report that he may not seek re-election for County Down at the Northern elections, said that he had not been called upon to make a decision on the matter. "In my opinion, however," he said, "the time has come when the people of the Six Counties who are opposed to partition ought to decide upon and adopt a common political policy. If the majority are in favour of the policy of sending representatives to the Belfast Parliament, then there would be little point in selecting me as a candidate. If the majority, on the other hand, should be in favour of the contrary policy, the position would be different.

"At any rate," he said, "the decision lies primarily with the people of Down, and I have not yet had an opportunity of learning what their views are."

CLEARING THE AIR.

THE NATIONALIST DIVISIONS.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

The situation in the Northern Ireland general election has become more clear, now that the two large Free State parties, Fianna Fail and the United Ireland Party, have decided not to intervene in the elections.

This will mean that the National League of the North candidates will be selected in the various Nationalist constituencies. Some have already been chosen, and the remainder will be selected at conventions during the week-end.

The extreme Republican section, however, is not following the lead of the two larger Free State parties, but seems determined to force contests in six Nationalist divisions. Under these circumstances the Unionists in some of these divisions are reconsidering their decision not to oppose the Nationalist candidates, and there is the possibility of three-cornered contests and the probable loss of several seats now held by the Nationalists, with a corresponding increase in the Unionist majority in Parliament.

NORTH DERRY SURPRISE.

There was a surprise in the elections this afternoon, when the North Derry Unionist delegates at a meeting in Coleraine selected Alderman D. H. Christie, Mayor of Coleraine, as candidate for the representation of the constituency. Mr. H. W. Leech presided, and there were ninety-seven delegates in attendance.

Alderman Christie had a majority of five at the meeting over the outgoing member, Mr. J. M. Mark, the vote being: Christie, 51; Mark, 46. Mr. Mark represented the division as official Unionist in the last Parliament, and before the last election secured the official nomination in preference to Alderman Christie by 61 votes to 37.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY.

The Queen's University Unionist Voters' Association this afternoon, at a meeting in Belfast, again selected the three retiring Unionist members—the Rev. Professor R. Corkey, M.A.; Professor R. J. Johnstone, F.R.C.S. (Eng.), and Mr. J. H. Robb, K.C., Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Education. There are four University seats, and the election is conducted on the proportional representation system.

The retiring Independent Unionist candidate, Mr. R. N. McNeill, who is being put forward as a Teachers' candidate, would have had a walk-over, but it is now announced that Dr. Frederick McSorley, M.D., D.P.H., a well-known Roman Catholic medical practitioner in Belfast and former Clinical Lecturer and Examiner in the University, is coming forward as an Independent candidate.

NORTH ANTRIM.

Sir Robert Lynn was this afternoon selected as Unionist candidate for North Antrim.

In returning thanks for his selection he said that there was only one question to be decided at this election, and that question was: Were they to remain, as they had always remained, part and parcel of the United Kingdom? They had now to go forward. They were never going to bow the knee to the Roman Catholic tyranny of the South of Ireland, and it was for that reason alone that he stood before them as standard-bearer that day.

They had their differences at times in the Unionist Party, as they could not expect thinking people always to think alike; but there was one thing in which they never differed, and that was the position of Ulster inside the British Empire. The other questions were of minor importance.

BELFAST CENTRAL DIVISION.

An adjourned Nationalist Convention to select a candidate for the Central Division of Belfast was held to-night. A deputation, consisting of Mr. T. J. Campbell, K.C.; Dr. Magauran, Messrs. B. Donnelly, D. McCluskey and Hugh McAlinden, that visited London to interview Mr. Joseph Devlin, in order to request him to reconsider his decision not to contest the seat, sent a telegram asking that the Convention be adjourned until Sunday.

No announcement was made regarding Mr. Devlin's decision, and the Convention was adjourned until Sunday at 3.30 p.m.

MINISTERS' CAMPAIGN.

The threatened opposition of Farmers' candidates in several divisions held by Unionists has been withdrawn, and it is anticipated that not more than two Farmers' representatives will be nominated on Monday.

The Prime Minister, Viscount Craigavon, and members of the Northern Cabinet will not commence the election campaign until next Tuesday, when the exact position in each constituency will be known. The Prime Minister intends to give his active support to Unionist candidates in those constituencies where their re-election may be challenged.

Judging from present indications, no serious opposition is threatened to any of the Unionist candidates, and the Government will be able to maintain, if it does not actually increase, its majority of 22 over all other parties.

SHANKILL DIVISION.

The intervention of a Communist candidate, Mr. Norman Teggart, in the Shankill Division of Belfast is not regarded very seriously. It is generally believed he has little chance of election, but he may take some votes from the sitting member. Mr. Thomas Henderson (Independent Unionist), but whether the number of detached votes will be sufficient to cause the defeat of Mr. Henderson by the official Unionist candidate, Mr. Norman Fulton, is problematical. Mr. Teggart unsuccessfully contested the Shankill Ward in the Poor Law elections.

OLDPARK DIVISION.

It was stated in Belfast to-night that Mr. W. Wilson, a member of the Belfast Board of Guardians, will be nominated in opposition to Sir William Hungerford in the Oldpark Division.

FOYLE DIVISION, DERRY.

Alderman Patrick McEnan, who was requested by a Nationalist deputation to stand as an Independent Nationalist against Mr. J. J. McCarroll in the Foyle Division of Derry, decided last night not to go forward.

SOUTH DOWN AND SOUTH ARMAGH.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NEWRY, Friday.

Representations have been made from both South Down and South Armagh to Fianna Fail to put forward candidates, but nothing definite had been reached up to this evening. A meeting in Newry on Thursday night invited Mr. de Valera to stand for his old constituency of South Down, and Mr. Frank Aiken, Free State Minister for Defence, for his native constituency, South Armagh.

The Republicans intimated that in the event of a Fianna Fail candidate standing for South Down the candidature of Mr. T. McGrath, Newry, would be withdrawn. In the event of the Republicans proceeding with the contest, it is likely that the candidature of Mr. Sean McCavitt (their election agent) will be substituted for that of Mr. McGrath.

Mr. Peter Murray, Killowen, who has been mentioned as a probable Republican candidate for Mourne, states that he will not stand for that or any other constituency.

POLITICAL PRISONERS RELEASED.

Numbers of prisoners in concentration camps in Saxony have already been released, although the official announcement of a political amnesty has not yet been promulgated.

The amnesty has been put into practice on the initiative of the Saxony secret police.

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA.

AGREEMENT IN WASHINGTON.

NORMAL RELATIONS RESUMED.

QUESTION OF RELIGIOUS FREEDOM STRESSED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Friday.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT announced to-day that the United States has agreed to resume normal relations with Russia, and will exchange Ambassadors. The agreement for recognition was reached at 11.50 p.m. last night, it was announced this evening.

Mr. W. C. Bullitt will be the first American Envoy to the Soviet. President Roosevelt has not yet been informed who will be the Soviet Envoy in Washington.

The President has published a series of letters between himself and M. Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, covering such questions as propaganda, religious freedom, and legal protection for the respective nations from prosecutions for economic espionage claims.

The Soviet has agreed to waive all claims arising out of the Siberian Expedition, but not in respect of the Archangel Expedition.

OUTSTANDING CLAIMS.

A joint statement issued by President Roosevelt and M. Litvinoff says that, "in addition to agreements which we have signed to-day, there has taken place an exchange of views in regard to the methods of settling all outstanding questions of indebtedness claims that permit us to hope for a speedy and satisfactory solution of these questions, which both Governments desire to have out of the way as soon as possible.

"M. Litvinoff will remain in Washington for several days for further discussions."

Mr. Roosevelt told the Press that normal relations were resumed at 11.50 last night.

In reading over the exchange of correspondence he particularly stressed his demand for religious freedom for United States residents in Russia.

DIPLOMACY AND FILMS.

Mr. William Christian Bullitt, who is the Administration's authority on Russia, and is 42 years of age, was associate editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger from 1915 to 1917, when he became an assistant in the Department of State. He was an Attaché to the American Commission to negotiate peace in 1918-1919, and he visited Russia as a member of a special American mission in 1919.

From diplomacy he turned to films. He became managing editor of the famous Players-Lasky Corporation in 1921.

In January of this year Mr. Bullitt was in England, and it was then reported—and denied—that he was acting as agent for President Roosevelt in debt talks. He has made a special study of the Soviet system of government.

FROM "THE TIMES."

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

CHANGES IN RHODESIA.

The Times in a leading article to-day says:—When the present financial year closes a decade will have passed since the Colonial Office took over Northern Rhodesia from the British South Africa Company. They have been years increasingly dominated by the fall in prices, and many promising schemes just had time to get started when the call for drastic economy went out. A particular instance at the moment is the building of a new capital at Lusaka, where private benefactors have most usefully and fortunately stepped in. The proposals of moving the capital from Livingstone, in the extreme South, were under discussed for years after the Company's office took over the territory. The mining area is in the extreme North, and the capital ought obviously to be in reasonable close touch with it. The conflicting considerations in favour of a central capital at a higher elevation than Livingstone brought general conviction, and the building of Lusaka is now [illegible]. But it is principally to [illegible] trustees that the colony owes [illegible] the next four years it is not [illegible] interest charges.

The Colonial [illegible] Advisory Committee has also [illegible] interest for three years at [illegible] £130,000 for water and ele[illegible]. Thanks to these private and [illegible]ssions, the work at Lusaka is [illegible]y available white labour in th[illegible] the Governor, Sir Ronald Storrs [illegible] address to the Legislative [illegible] been able to announce the [illegible] of the aerial services upon [illegible] large a territory must inevitab[illegible] and here again the colony is gr[illegible]ebted to the Beit Trustees. H[illegible] with pride that Northern R[illegible] continues to meet its necessities [illegible] own resources, and that the situatio[illegible]steadily improving, so that there are good grounds for thinking that the era of drastic retrenchment is past.

NORTHERN PEER AND PARTITION.

FREE STATE CRITICISED.

Lord Cushendun, formerly Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the British Government, who now resides at Cushendun, North Antrim, in an interview in the Belfast Telegraph criticises the proposal that Free State politicians should take part in Northern elections.

"I can hardly believe that they think such a policy possible," he declared, "but as they have propounded it, it represents an issue which the people of Northern Ireland cannot ignore.

"The gulf between us and the Free State grows wider as the years pass, and a Government so childish, so foolish, and so incapable is not one we want to be putting a finger in our pie.

"Everything that has occurred during the last two or three years has proved what madness it would be for the people of Ulster to join politically with the rest of Ireland. Not that I have any hostility to the Free State, for I am proud of being an Irishman, and I should be sorry to make my home on the other side of the channel; but I am convinced that the prosperity of Ulster depends, not upon union with the South and West of Ireland, but with Great Britain, and that economically the closer we stick to England the better it will be for ourselves."

"The Financing of Industry" was the title of a lecture delivered last night before a meeting of the Irish Institute of Bankers, held at Jury's Hotel, Dame street, Dublin, by Professor Shields.

SITTINGS OF THE DAIL.

ABSENCE OF BUSINESS.

EARLY RISING FOR CHRISTMAS.

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE fact that the Dail, after five weeks' holiday, had not sufficient business to keep it in session for a whole week on its resumption is being construed variously by political observers. It is not because of the absence of legislative projects; for, in addition to bills already introduced, but not yet circulated, there are nearly a dozen other measures which it is known the Government intend to put through the Oireachtas as soon as possible. Most of these have been promised by Ministers, or are already a part of the intended legislative programme. Why the delay in getting on with the work? There is no suggestion of unusual pressure in the draftsmen's office. The five weeks' respite which Ministers have just enjoyed from the irksome work of attendance in the Dail should have afforded adequate time for the preparation of the intended measures.

FEWER SITTINGS.

In the circumstances, it is not surprising that the belief is growing that the Government's intention is to reduce the sittings of the Dail as much as possible. Admittedly, the Dail is becoming an increasingly unpleasant place for Ministers, in view of the frequent sharp criticism to which they are subjected. For much of this they are themselves to blame, because of the growing tendency to refuse information on various points on which they are from time to time interrogated. No doubt, the Government will be obliged to make up for their dilatoriness later on by rushing through important matters with the aid of all-night sittings, which do not conduce to the production of well-considered legislation. The rumour is that an effort will be made to adjourn the Dail early in December for the Christmas recess, in which case there does not appear to be much hope of advancing such major measures as the Government are understood to have in mind.

REDUCED MEMBERSHIP.

Amongst these is a bill to revise the membership of the Dail, with a consequent rearrangement of the constituencies. It is understood that the preparation of this is well advanced, and it is not improbable that Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly will introduce it in the coming week. Simultaneously with this there will be a bill for the abolition of university representation. It is not unlikely that at the same time there will be introduced a scheme for the alteration of the Senate. With regard to this no information is available. It is not clear whether Mr. de Valera has yet resolved the doubts which he expressed some time ago in the Dail as to what scheme of reform he would favour, or, indeed, whether he would not abolish it altogether.

The Courts of Justice Bill is another important measure in which many of the legal members of the Fianna Fail Party have more than a passing interest. This, it is understood, will be based to some extent on the findings of the Courts of Justice Committee which sat some years ago and made recommendations for the strengthening of the High Courts, the re-introduction of the system of Assize Courts and various other important changes in the present system.

Other bills which are spoken of are an Agricultural De-rating Bill, which was promised by Dr. Ryan, Minister for Agriculture, at the recent Fianna Fail Ard-Fheis; a bill to amend the lunacy laws, a Factories Bill, a bill revising the system of rating of houses built under the housing legislation in recent years, and a bill dealing with scientific industrial research.

BERENGARIA'S STORY OF OCEAN SEARCH.

ROCKET REPORTS REVIVE HOPES OF RESCUE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CHERBOURG, Friday.

The commander of the Berengaria, Captain Britten, told on arrival here this evening a thrilling story of how his liner spent seven hours searching for the crew of the British steamer Saxilby, who had taken to the boats in the Atlantic gale off the Irish coast.

The Berengaria had made the roughest crossing from New York in the last seven years in 6 days 8 hours 9 minutes. Captain Britten went on to say that he was informed of the Saxilby's S.O.S. when the liner was 350 miles from the smaller vessel. The Berengaria at once made all speed through mountainous seas to the spot indicated in the S.O.S., and was the first ship to arrive. They spent seven hours searching for the Saxilby's crew, but without avail.

Captain Britten feared that no hope remained for the crew of the Saxilby. He did not see how any vessel could locate the lifeboats.

Two Cardiff trawlers, the Naniwa and Oku, have reported that early to-day they saw distress rockets in the vicinity of where the steamship Saxilby was reported to be in difficulties and to have been abandoned, and that they were hastening to the scene.

Up to a late hour the Cardiff owners of the trawlers had not received any further information from them.

The following message was received by Lloyds at Valentia from the British steamer Mercian, shortly afterwards: "Supposed rockets seen in latitude 50.48 north; longitude 16.39 west."

OFFICIAL INFLATION DENIAL.

U.S. PURCHASES OF BRITISH BONDS DISCOURAGED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Friday.

The dollar, after settling down within comparatively narrow limits to-day, rallied again when the Government denied that it was contemplating a moderate issue of "greenbacks" (currency notes).

Foreign exchange brokers received an unofficial warning that every exchange transaction would be more closely scrutinised than hitherto.

Wall street is alive with rumours of a ban on the export of capital, and the possibility of the recall of already-exported capital is mentioned. The purchase of British 4 per Cent. 1990 Bonds has been officially discouraged, says the Journal of Commerce.

President Roosevelt has received Governmental reports that a million men have been transferred from the relief rolls to the Federal pay-roll through the civil works administration. The administration expects to disburse four hundred million dollars (£80,000,000) to workers by means of civil works projects between now and February. It is estimated that four million jobs will be made available.

BUTTER TO COST MORE.

GROWING STOCKS IN FREE STATE.

THREAT OF IMPORTS IF "PROFITEERING."

AN UNUSUAL SITUATION.

An increase of ½d. per lb. in the retail price of creamery butter;
An enormous increase in the quantity of cold-stored butter in the Free State;
A threat to allow the importation of butter to check possible "profiteering."

These are the outstanding features of a circular issued yesterday by the Free State Department of Agriculture to all creamery managers and non-manufacturing exporters of butter.

The circular intimates that, in the Minister's opinion, the delivered price of bulk, salted creamery butter in wholesale lots should not exceed 136s. 6d. per cwt., which would involve an increase of ½d. per pound in the retail price. This increase is intended to cover the cost of storing butter for winter requirements.

It is also stated in the Department's circular that, if any concerted effort is made by the producers or holders of creamery butter which would have the effect of increasing the cost to the consumer beyond that indicated above, the Minister will take steps to allow the import of butter to such extent as may be necessary to counteract any such attempt.

The prices mentioned do not apply to unsalted butter and butter packed in rolls, which are always sold at higher prices owing to the additional cost of preparation and packing.

It is mentioned that stocks of creamery butter in public cold stores and at the premises of the manufacturers and principal merchants, which amounted to 51,173 cwts. on the 15th October, had increased to 67,568 cwts. on the 31st October. It is anticipated that the stocks on the 15th November, returns in regard to which are now being compiled, will show a further increase.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED.

TEXT OF THE KING'S SPEECH.

THE following is the text of the King's Speech proroguing Parliament, as read in the House of Lords by the Lord Chancellor yesterday:—

MY LORDS AND MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,—

I rejoice to observe the steady improvement in trade and employment among my people.

Trade agreements, which will, I trust, be found mutually advantageous, have been concluded with a number of foreign countries. Negotiations with other countries for the conclusion of similar agreements will shortly be begun.

I have been gratified to learn that the question of flag discrimination in Portuguese ports, which has for some years been a subject of discussion, has now been satisfactorily settled by an agreement between my Government and that of the Portuguese Republic.

I had pleasure in welcoming to London in June last the delegates to the session of the World Monetary and Economic Conference. My Prime Minister acted as President of the Conference at the request of the Council of the League of Nations. Considerable progress was made with certain questions, but owing to unexpected developments in the international monetary and financial situatio the Conference was, to my regret, unable to reach conclusions on certain important matters before its adjournment on the 27th July. It is, however, satisfactory that a joint declaration as to their views on some of the principal subjects raised at the Conference was drawn up by delegations of the British Commonwealth and published. The Conference has left in being suitable organisations charged with the task of fixing the date of reassembly and of making the the preliminary arrangements necessary for the purpose.

My Government have throughout taken an active part at the Disarmament Conference, and the British draft, which was presented on the 16th March, was adopted in June last as the basis of the proposed Convention. I earnestly trust that the difficulties which have since arisen may be surmounted. The withdrawal of Germany a month ago from the deliberations at Geneva has necessarily dislocated the programme, but the work for international disarmament by agreement between nations must be vigorously pursued.

MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,—

I thank you for the provision you have made for the public service.

MY LORDS AND MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,—

The continued willingness of my people to bear heavy sacrifices has made it possible for this country, almost alone among the great countries of the world, to maintain a satisfactory balance between its national income and expenditure. Confidence has been restored by the pursuit of a sound financial policy, accompanied by the establishment of a reasonable measure of protection for the industry of the United Kingdom.

The steps taken to promote the reorganisation of various sections of agriculture and the sea-fishing industry have not yet had time to show their full results, but I am pleased to note that there are already definite signs of improvement. The numbers of the unemployed, though still unhappily far too large, have fallen substantially and continuously in recent months, despite the usual seasonal trend in the opposite direction.

Bills have received my Assent providing for the amendment and continuation of the Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Acts; for the reorganisation of the London passenger transport; for the licensing and regulation of goods motor-vehicles; for the consolidation of the law relating to children and young persons, and for the amendment of the law relating to the national status of married women. A number of other measures of public utility have been passed into law.

I pray that the blessing of Almighty God may rest upon your labours.

THE ROYAL ASSENT.

Before the King's Speech was read in the House of Lords yesterday, the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Plymouth, Earl Stanhope, Lord Denman and Lord Howard of Penrith sat as a Royal Commission and signified the Royal Assent to the following, among other, Acts: The Road and Rail Traffic Act, the Local Government Act, the Firearms and Imitation Firearms (Criminal Use) Act, the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, and the Protection of Birds Act.

PETTIFER WINS FIRST FIGHT IN U.S.A.

The London boxer, Jack Pettifer, won his first fight in the United States when he knocked out Jack McCoy in the third round. McCoy is a cousin of Jack Dempsey, former world's champion. Pettifer scaled 15st. 4½lb. and McCoy 14st. 11½lb.

MR. BALDWIN ON TARIFFS.

THEY CANNOT DO EVERYTHING.

THE DISARMAMENT DIFFICULTIES.

IN his speech last night at Edinburgh Mr. Baldwin made reference to prohibition, quotas and duties in regard to agriculture. Many people who had not studied those questions believed, he said, that the tariff might have been used much more than it had been.

There was some slight applause at this remark, and Mr. Balwin commented:—I sympathise with those cheers. I used to think myself that a tariff could do everything. I am convinced to-day that it cannot. You want all three weapons.

Conditions to-day are that you have such variations, such unsettlement of national currencies, that the tariff you put on to-day may be completely nullified in a week by changes in the currency of the importing country, and the only way to make certain that less goods from a foreign country should be put into this country is to stop them by quantity. Then you know where you are.

Dealing with disarmament, Mr. Baldwin said many men's hearts were failing because of difficulties ahead. It is to clearing away these political difficulties he added, that our energies are directed at this moment. The absence of Germany, the attitude of Italy as reported in the Press, are real political difficulties. There is a treaty which for years has been the basis of security in Western Europe, and upon faith in which it has been possible to conduct, so far as we have conducted, the Disarmament Conference itself.

We shall not get peace by letting the world know that our engagements are scraps of paper. We shall not get peace by disarming further than we have done. (Cheers.)

After referring to dictatorships in other countries, Mr. Baldwin said:—At this moment there are those in this country who seem to believe that they have a mission to seize power and to use it, and to bring by rapid means and by violent, if necessary, changes which they advocate. At all costs, for the health and well-being of the nation, these attempts must be defeated.

LATEST MOVE AT GENEVA.

WHY MR. CHURCHILL IS ALARMED.

Mr. Churchill, at Loughton, Essex, last night, said that he was disturbed to see the news in that morning's papers that Sir John Simon and his Under-Secretary, or Joint Secretary, Mr. Eden, had gone to Geneva to try to revive the Disarmament Conference, and to advocate the so-called Macdonald plan. Of course it would be a very good thing if submarines were abolished altogether, and if all the air forces of the Powers were reduced to our low level. But everyone knew that there was not the slightest chance of other countries agreeing to this.

What was so alarming was the manner in which England was being made to take the lead in pressing other countries in great danger to weaken their defences. We ought to be content with doing our duty as a member of the League of Nations, and not putting ourselves in a position of undue prominence unless we were prepared to shoulder our responsibilities of leadership and face the consequences, whatever they might be.

The Prime Minister had a mania for conferences. Every one that he had been concerned in had either failed or else it succeeded only at the expense of our country. My advice, he said, is plain and clear. Drop all this mischief-making pretence of disarmament while dangers and fierce hatreds and jealousies are rife. Let Great Britain do her part and her duty in the League of Nations, and with all the other countries, small as well as great.

LORD LONDONDERRY'S PROTEST.

MISREPRESENTATION AT BY-ELECTIONS.

Lord Londonderry (Secretary of State for Air), speaking last night at Preston, referred to "deliberate misrepresentation" of the Government's policy of disarmament by the Opposition when several by-elections were taking place.

Great Britain, he said, had never faltered in her determination to maintain peace, and the Government had imposed drastic limitations of our forces. But in this direction it was impossible to expect them to do more. The Foreign Secretary was on his way to Geneva, charged by the Government to do all in his power to place the Conference once more in a position to prod ce a convention which would proclaim the determination of all the signatories to maintain peace, and to formulate the best practical means of carrying out that determination.

DRAIN ON FRANCE'S GOLD.

MINISTER'S WARNING FAILS TO CONVERT CHAMBER.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Friday.

Speaking before the Finance Commission of the Chamber, the Minister of Finance, M. Georges Bonnet, drew a rather dark picture of what would be the position of the Treasury if the Budget were not speedily balanced.

He stressed the seriousness of the drain of gold from the Bank of France, which he attributed more to psychological than technical causes.

He estimated the Treasury's requirements for next year at seventeen milliard francs. The Treasury would have to borrow, but, according to authentic report (the proceedings are secret), the Minister stated no figure.

The Finance Commission maintains, on the whole, its hostility towards the Government's financial proposals.

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE.

BRISTOL LANDING-PLACE.

In connection with the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease, which was confirmed at Backwell, Somersetshire, on the 23rd ultimo, and in which the Irish animals' landing place at Bristol was involved, the Free State Department of Agriculture are now officially informed by the British Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries that an Order has been issued by the Ministry further contracting the infected area on and from the 18th November.

An effect of the Order is to put the landing place for Irish animals at Bristol outside the contracted area above described on and from the 18th instant, and consequently animals from Free State ports may be landed thereat on the usual conditions on and from the 18th instant.

Dr. George Hewson gave an organ recital in St. Patrick's Cathedral last night, when a carefully selected programme of classical music was rendered before a large congregation.

SIR JOHN SIMON'S DASH TO GENEVA.

SPECULATION IN THE CAPITALS.

WILL IT SAVE ARMS CONFERENCE?

FRANCE PUZZLED BY BRITISH POLICY.

THE eyes of watchful observers, both in Paris and Berlin, are fixed upon Sir John Simon, and his unexpected dash to Geneva is the subject of interested speculation in both capitals.

Rome, too, is anxious to see whether the project for a meeting of the signatories of the Four Power Pact in the Fascist capital will be brought a step nearer through the talks which Sir John will have in Geneva.

"The French Government's attitude is extremely elastic," Reuter's Correspondent in Paris was authoritatively informed last evening. "It is ready to listen to any suggestion that might save the Disarmament Conference and the League, but the tendency does not seem to be towards a limited meeting of four or five Great Powers."

Sir John Simon's rush to Geneva has aroused wide comment and speculation. Once again the British attitude is a riddle to the French.

"NO CONCESSIONS."

The French position, on the contrary, is clear-cut. No further concessions will be made just in order to bring Germany back to the fold, and the amended, not the original, Macdonald plan is as far as France can go. It is pointed out that the British, who decline to assume any further obligations, should understand this.

Commenting upon Sir John Simon's visit to Geneva, the Berlin Angriff—Dr. Goebbel's newspaper—writes:—"England is, without doubt, trying to arrange a Four or Five Power Conference. We have nothing against it, if the British Press is puzzled as to the possibility of German co-operation. Whether in Rome or elsewhere, only the unchangeable German demands for peace and equality can be discussed. The German-Polish exchange of views has shown the world that agreements do not have to be reached via Geneva, nor must they end in big conferences in which every jealous intriguer can take a hand."

NEW FRENCH PLAN.

Details were made public in Geneva last night of the new French plan of control, which has been submitted to the special committee dealing with the question.

The new proposals are designed to ensure security by a system of checks regarding the proper execution of the Disarmament Convention. There will be three kinds of control:—

1—Documentary control. This will deal with effectives and material. Incidentally, the manufacture of munitions will be controlled by licence.

2—Control of expenditure.

3—Control by investigation on the spot.

It is proposed that there shall not only be periodical automatic and permanent control, but that the investigations shall take place without previous warning.

ITALY LUKEWARM.

It is reported from Rome that Italy will be represented at the conversations, which begin to-morrow with the arrival of Sir John Simon and M. Paul-Boncour, by the Marquis de Soragna, Minister Plenipotentiary, who is in charge of League of Nations affairs at the Italian Foreign Office.

Baron Aloisi will be going to Geneva for the moment, and this is taken to imply that Italy does not intend to depart from the rôle she has assigned herself provisionally—namely, that of observer.

It also means that it will be much more difficult for Sir John Simon to achieve any very effective action towards giving fresh impetus to the work of the Conference.

The United States will be represented by their Minister at Berne.

There is a belief in some quarters that the discussions in Geneva may be only of a preliminary character, and that the venue may be shifted later if the talks show any prospect of agreement.

NEBULOUS SITUATION.

Sir John Simon, Mr. Eden and M. Paul-Boncour left Paris for Geneva at 10 o'clock last night. A personage accompanying Sir John Simon said to Reuter's Correspondent: "The situation is nebulous. We are going on a voyage of exploration. We can say no more than that."

JAPAN'S HUGE BUDGET.

INCREASED ARMED FORCES PROVIDED FOR.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TOKYO, Friday.

Appropriations for the complete equipment of the Japanese military forces, a naval replenishment programme, including the re-equipment of capital ships and the completion of the Air Force, have been approved by the Japanese Finance Minister for the 1934 Budget, which is estimated to amount to 2,017,000,000 yen (£100,350,000 at par). The estimated expenditure for 1932-33 was 1,397,100,000 yen.

The discussion of the Budget was opened to-day.

IRISHMEN CALLED TO ENGLISH BAR.

Among those called to the Bar at the Inns of Court yesterday, says the Daily Telegraph, were the following:—

Middle Temple—Lord Hemphill, B.A. (New College, Oxford), barrister-at-law, King's Inn, Dublin.

Inner Temple—E. S. O'Mahony (Trinity College, Dublin, and University College, Cork), barister-at-law, King's Inns, Dublin.

Gray's Inn—R. H. Keatinge, B.A., LL.B. (Trinity College, Dublin).

THE MOTHERS' UNION.

SERMON BY PRIMATE OF ALL IRELAND.

GREATEST NEED OF WORLD TO-DAY.

THE Primate of All Ireland preached at Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, yesterday, at the special Service and celebration of Holy Communion in connection with the annual conference of the Mothers' Union in Ireland. There was a good attendance, and the offertory was devoted to the N.R. and Protestant Children's Aid Society.

The Primate, who took as his text "It is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven, that one of these little ones should perish" (St. Matthew, 18th chap., 14th verse), said: "In this great passage of our Lord's teaching he is thinking of children and our duty towards them. He took a little child and set him in the midst. He makes the simplicity of the child an example. He dwells on the awfulness of sin against the child and of how terribly it calls down Divine judgment. We are not to despise the little ones, for 'in Heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father.' He teaches about the love of God seeking out those who have gone astray; and of joy in heaven when the lost is saved. This sums up in the words of our text.

BLESSING OF CHILDREN.

"The Mothers' Union exists to set forth Christian teaching about the family, and protect the family—its purity, its consecration of the simple natural relationship of our human life, its sanctuary for the blessing of the children. We are quite sure that these aims are in accordance with the mind and will of Christ. He loved children. 'Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not.'' He loves them to-day as He loved them when He was on earth. This is the truth expressed in Infant Baptism. None are too small for His love. "Suffer the babies to come unto Me." That is the exact meaning of the word used in St. Luke. As a mother looks upon her babe with with a depth of love no words can express, so does God, the great Father, Christ the Saviour, regard the little ones. It is, no doubt, a love deeper even than human love. "It is not the will of your Father in Heaven that one of these little ones should perish."

PRAYER IN FAMILY LIFE.

With these thoughts in mind, may I say a few words about the place of prayer in the life of the family? The prayer of prayers is that which we call the Lord's Prayer. It was given by Christ Himself to be both a form for us to use and an example for us to follow in our petitions. It is presented to us in the Gospels in both ways. Let me, by illustration of what I have said, take its first three petitions and apply them to the life of the family—let us think of them as petitions offered by parents with their children in view. The whole prayer is dominated by the first words, the address to God — "Our Father which art in Heaven." These words give us at once the right attitude of approach to God and the right spirit. Christ wills us to think of God as our Father. One who loves us as His children, one Whose great over-ruling providence and power are animated by love. He is our Father in Heaven —that is, He belongs to an upper world of truth and purity and goodness. There in that upper world the things that worry and perplex us on earth find their solution. The conviction expressed by this address is in itself enough to lift us above our doubts and difficulties. Parents thinking of their children, set here in this world of so many sad imperfections—surrounded by temptations and influences from which we cannot protect them—may well take comfort from the faith that above us is the great Father in heaven, in whose loving hands are all the issues of life and death.

"Dwell in your hearts on those words, 'Our Father, in Heaven'; take them into the deeper springs of your being, and they will yield you an unfailing source of comfort and strength. And out of this springs the true meaning of the first petition of the prayer, 'Hallowed be Thy Name.' You rise upward to the thought of the Glory of God—His holiness, His sovereignty, which is the sovereignty of Love. An old writer says somewhere, 'Do not very often, in the hearing of your children, name the name of God. But at great moments, when their hearts are moved, when they see the splendour of the sunset sky, when they have experienced some great gladness, or been saved from some great danger, then name the name of God."

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

"And then enters the thought of the Kingdom of God. 'Thy kingdom come.' This is one of the great ruling principles of Our Lord's teaching. It should, indeed, be placed next to that of the Fatherhood of God. What does it mean? The best scholarship, as well as the simplest interpretation, agrees, I think, in taking it to mean simply, 'The Rule of God.' When you pray for the coming of God's Kingdom in relation to the common things of daily life, in connection with the home, the family and the children, your prayer surely means that you pray that God the great Father may rule in all these things. 'Thy Kingdom Come' in our home, in our social relationship, in our common duties, in our business—what does it mean but that we pray God to rule—to give us the law of our life—in all these things. And then we pray that God's will may be done. There is one supreme law which is the highest in the universe. It is the will of God, and with Him as with all beings to whom he has imparted something of his own image, the will is no arbitrary thing—it is the expression of his character. Human wills at their best are wavering and uncertain. The will of God is the ultimate law of the universe. In bestowing upon us the gift of thought and responsibility he has placed us in such a position that our highest good is the unconstrained choice of that which is in accordance with His will. Moved by faith and love towards Him, we can make this choice. When we pray, 'Thy will be done,' we pray for the continued exercise of that choice. We pray also for all that constitutes our true blessedness. When we offer this petition in connection with our family life, it means that we seek for our children that in them, in their life and work, the will of God may be done, and there comes to us the blessed assurance: 'It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones should perish.'

IN DANGEROUS DAYS.

"We live in dangerous days. The old sheltered life of the home is now hardly possible for the very young. There is in talk and in literature a freedom—I might say a license—which would have shocked the past generation. There also is an open and often aggressive atheism, which finds expression in ways which are not easily avoided. On the other hand, religion is far more outspoken than it was a generation ago. Our great newspapers now make articles on religion a regular part of their contents. The wireless broadcasts church services and sermons as freely as concerts and news. It is clear that the religious element is quite as important for it as the secular performances. The daily services and the Sunday evening epilogue are welcomed in multitudes of homes. There are very hopeful and cheering signs. Christians, in spite of the alarms of the age, have no reason for discouragement. Lift up your hearts. We lift them up to the Lord.

Perhaps it is true to say that the world to-day needs Christ more urgently and with a deeper sense of need than at any time in the past.

GLUT OF TURKEYS.

CALL FOR INCREASE IN BOUNTY.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

CORK, Friday.

That, consequent on the alteration in the British tariff on turkeys and the glut of turkeys available this year, an increase in the bounty rate was urgently needed, was the view expressed to-day by several Cork dealers and exporters.

It also was stated that turkeys in the home market, owing to the big supplies available, would be considerably cheaper this year.

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

SECOND DAY'S PLAY.

ENGLAND LEADS BY 2,920 POINTS.

FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

THE second day's play in the Contract Bridge match began here to-day, with the Northern Ireland team holding a lead of 2,260 points. Although this was partly due to the disorganisation of Colonel Buller's team, caused by the illness of two players, there is no doubt that the Irish lead was largely due to their brilliant bidding and play on many occasions. In particular Mr. McKinnon, the Northern Ireland captain, has distinguished himself in this respect, and on one occasion he had the very bad luck to miss a grand slam vulnerable after particularly brilliant bidding on his part.

The following is the hand, and it is of interest to note that the much-discussed four, five, no trump convention was used by the Northern Ireland pair in Room 1.

NORTH—S., Q 7 6; H., J 10 5 4 2; D., 9; C., K 10 9 3.

EAST—S., 4 3; H., Q 6; D., J 8 6 4; C., Q J 8 6 5.

SOUTH—S., 9 8 5; H., K 8 7 3; D., 10 5 3; C., 7 4 2.

WEST—S., A K J 10 2; H., A 9; D., A K Q 7 2; C., A.

East-West were vulnerable, and North was the dealer.

In Room 1 the North-South (Kempson and Mathieson) passed throughout.

East—No bid. West—2 Spades.
East—2 no Trumps. West—3 Diamonds.
East—4 Diamonds. West—4 no Trumps.
East—5 Diamonds. West—5 no Trumps.
East—6 Diamonds. West—7 Diamonds.

North led the 9 of Diamonds, and West (Mr. McKinnan) could only make 12 tricks.

ROOM 2.

In Room 2 the English pair held the same hand, and, after West had made an original bid of 3 Spades, the bidding, for some unaccountable reason, dried up. In this room the Jack of Hearts was led, and West made 11 tricks, scoring 340 points.

The hand was thus a net gain of 440 points to England, whereas, with any luck at all, the Northern Irish team in Room 1 would have scored 140 for their contract, 2,250 for grand slam, and 500 for game—total 2,890. Such is contract bridge, and especially duplicate.

UNUSUAL INTEREST.

It is remarkable what great interest has been aroused in Belfast by this match. At both sessions to-day the two rooms were besieged with would-be spectators, not one-half of whom could see the play. Among the distinguished visitors present was the Viscountess Craigavon, wife of the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland.

Great satisfaction was expressed on all sides that Mrs. Gorden Evers had recovered sufficiently to be able to play to-day, it being generally felt that the English team had been too seriously depleted and disorganised to put up a show in keeping with their reputation. This put the Irish players on their mettle, and determined them not to lose the lead which they gained yesterday. The English players being equally determined to wipe it out, or at least considerably to reduce it, the large number of bridge enthusiasts present witnessed an epic struggle.

Exchanges were in favour of England from the commencement of play, and Ireland suffered some heavy reverses.

At hand 48 England took the lead for the first time in the match.

At the half-way stage of the match England led by 590 points.

At the end of hand 80 England was leading by 2,920 points.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

UNWANTED DOGS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Last week a case was reported in the Dublin Press where a man was charged with cruelty by a Civic Guard for throwing a grey-hound into a canal lock with its hind legs tied together with cord. There were only eighteen inches of water in the lock, which was twenty feet deep. The defence was that the owner of the dog thought the lock was full of water and that he intended to drown the dog, as it had eczema and efforts made to cure it had failed. The District Justice decided that there had been no deliberate cruelty and dismissed the case.

My Committee wish to inform the public that there is absolutely no need to destroy unwanted dogs and cats by the often very cruel method of drowning them. The Dogs' and Cats' Home at Grand Canal quay (Telephone No. 62697) is open on every day of the week, except Sunday, until 5 p.m., and cases of emergency are taken in at any time. Unwanted animals may be left at the Home without charge; there is an ambulance which will be sent for dogs which cannot walk to the Home, and stray cats will be collected. The Dublin Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals wish to give warning that they will prosecute any person found attempting to destroy animals in a cruel manner. They are always ready to give advice and help in the case of an unwanted animal.—Yours, etc.,

As a result of similar appeals in previous years kind friends have sent us useful articles. We will be very grateful for such gifts at present, as ours is one of the Dublin parishes in which there is poverty and distress.

Articles may be addressed to me and sent to St. Barnabas's Schoolhouse, Upper Sheriff street, Dublin; or, if a postcard be sent to me at 59 Waterloo road, Dublin, not later than Wednesday next, arrangements can be made to have the articles called for.—Yours, etc.,

THE AMERICAN MARKETS.

LOWER COMMODITIES A DEPRESSING INFLUENCE: STOCKS CLOSE EASY.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

NEW YORK, Friday.

The reactionary tendency of the principal commodities induced the exercise of caution on the Stock Exchange to-day. Price movements were narrowly irregular until near the close, when the recovery in the dollar led to considerable selling, but losses in the general list were confined to a maximum of 2 points. The turnover amounted to 2,320,000 shares.

The opening tone was firm. Mild profit-taking in Mining shares, a few of which declined 1 to 2 points, had an unsettling influence on the remainder of the list during the morning, but the resultant losses were cut down as the market again turned upward.

The Industrial and Utility groups displayed a firm aspect. Rails also improved, but the gains were confined to fractions to 1. Wall street at this juncture was feverishly discussing rumours of developments in the monetary programme.

In the afternoon many issues advanced fractions to a point, while losses which occurred elsewhere under spasmodic profit-taking were for the most part small.

Selling predominated in the late dealings owing to the rally in the dollar and the decline in the leading commodities, and the market closed easy.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Friday.

The easier tone of cable advices and the lower sterling rate encouraged selling by professional interests during the early part of to-day's session on the Grain Market. Prices backed and filled within narrow limits, with small orders either way being sufficient to influence the market. In the afternoon prices declined further under scattered selling by commission houses and on liquidation, while the uncovering of stop-loss orders was in evidence. Wheat early declined under moderate commission house selling. Cash interests were buying in the December option against sales in the May delivery, while scattered selling, due to fears of an increased movement from the N.W. area through the modification of the N. Dakota embargo, also had a depressing effect near the close. Prices rallied in sympathy with the firmer tone of the Stock Market. Maize early eased owing to the liberal character of country offerings, but subsequently rallied on purchasing by houses with Government connections. The market was also influenced by the movements in wheat. Rye fluctuated in sympathy with wheat, while oats moved in unison with maize.

LIVERPOOL.—Higher American and Argentine markets, with heavy depreciation in sterling rates of exchange, caused forward deliveries of wheat here to improve considerably during the early trading but demand for c.i.f. parcels was disappointing and prices receded slightly from the best point. PROVISIONS.

LONDON.—BUTTER—A fair inquiry was dealt with during the past week, and a steady tone governed the market. There has been an excellent clearance, and, in addition to imports, the total cold stores stocks decreased during last month by the equivalent of 249,562 boxes. Danish is a steady market, and commands a considerable premium on other descriptions. Germany has been taking 5,000-6,000 casks extra weekly, which lessened the supply available for this country. Finest unsalted kinds of colonial are unusually scarce. Quotations: New Zealand finest salted 85/- to 88/-; Australian ditto 85/- to 87/-, good to fine 80/- to 82/-, inferior 78/-, unsalted 98/- to 106/-. Argentine finest unsalted 88/- to 96/-, good to fine 76/- to 84/-. Danish 119/- to 120/-. Dutch creamery unsalted 112/- to 116/-, Latvian 90/-, Lithuanian 90/-, to 90/-, and 92/- to 93/-. Siberian 75/- to 80/- per cwt. Dutch rolls 12/9 to 13/3 per dozen lbs. English 1/3½ per lb. CHEESE—Demand continues unsatisfactory, and a dull tone prevailed, with prices of colonial barely steady. Canada is not coming so freely as last year, the stock in Montreal on 1st November being 88,000 boxes more than in 1932, while on this side, although imports have been lighter, stocks are 12,300 boxes larger. English makes continue scarce and dear, but little is rather difficult to place. Quotations: English farmers' ranges from 74/- to 90/-, ditto loaf 84/- to 92/- per cwt. Cheshire officially graded 1/1, ungraded 1/- to 1/0½, stilton 1/4 to 1/8. BACON—Market generally quiet, with demand directed to the cheaper selections. Official quotations remained unaltered. Irish quoted 76/- to 83/-, Danish 74/- to 78/-, Dutch 66/- to 71/-, Swedish 74/- to 75/-, Estonian 69/-, Latvian 68/- to 69/-, Lithuanian 63/- to 67/-, Russian 62/- to 67/-, Canadian 85/- to 89/-, English (Wiltshire) sides smoked 88/-, ditto green 82/- to 94/- cwt. Danish arrivals 43,852 bales against against 43,761 last week. HAMS in fair request at steady rates. INSURANCE CARDS CASE.

EMPLOYER FINED 9/-.

At Rathfarnham District Court yesterday, before District Justice Reddin, the Free State Ministry of Industry and Commerce summoned John Casey, Tibradden, Rockbrook, for failing to provide unemployment cards to his employés.

Mr. D. O'Donovan, Chief State Solicitor's office, prosecuted, and Mr. S. O hUadhaigh, solicitor, defended.

Evidence was given by men, who stated that they were employed on Mr. Casey's farm and had not received insurance cards

John Murray, inspector under the National Health Insurance, said that when he called on Mr. Casey he said that the men were partially employed in the pit and on the farm. The witness said that allowance had been made in the arrears with regard to the time in which the men worked on the farm. The arrears for unemployment insurance were £43 3s. 3d., and that for national health insurance £28 10s. 8d.

In reply to Mr. O'Donovan, witness said that he would issue a card to any of his employés who brought him cards. He did not deduct anything from the men's wages.

Mr. O hUadhaigh said that it had been shown that most of the men had been employed substantially as farm labourers.

Mr. O'Donovan said that defendant must have known that he was liable to pay unemployment insurance in respect of these employés, and he asked the Justice to inflict a severe penalty.

Mr. Justice Reddin said that the defendant had failed to pay health insurance as well as unemployment insurance. With regard to the arrears of £28 10s. 8d. national health insurance, he said that he was not satisfied that on the present summons the plaintiffs could proceed. They would have to proceed by civil bill, and he dismissed the cases.

He gave a decree for £43 3s. 3d. in respect of unemployment insurance, and fined defendant 9s. and £2 8s. 8d. costs.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE.

CUP FOR LUCKY PATCH.

OLD RILEY'S GREAT RACE TO GET HOME BY A NECK.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

DERBY, Friday Night.

SIR ALFRED BUTT'S Lucky Patch won the Derby Cup, but I must say that I think he was a little fortunate to have beaten Mr. William McElroy's Court Equerry by half a length. Had Court Equerry not stumbled fifty yards from home, in all probability the winner would never have got up.

It was a sunny day, but very cold. More often than not the Derby Cup is run in a fog, and little is seen of it. This time it was run in a perfect light.

There was some vigorous wagering over the race, Mr. Tattersall's colt, Brunswick, closing favourite from two other three-year-olds, Lucky Patch and Brumby. Court Equerry, although it must be said for him that his form has been consistent, had not done enough to cause much attention to be attracted by his chance, and he started at 100 to 6.

COURT EQUERRY SETS THE PACE.

The north country jockey, E. Fox, rode him, and he set the pace, which was a slow one, in the early stages from Mereworth, Constant Vixen and Brunswick, who was well placed on the rails. They ran thus for upwards of a mile, when Constant Vixen began to drop back, and Lucky Patch was moving up from the middle of the field.

Mereworth was beaten half-way up the straight, when Lucky Patch had come to a challenging position. Sir Alfred Butt's colt soon had Brunswick beaten, but he could not make such impression on Court Equerry, who was hanging on grimly to his lead.

E. Fox was pushing him for all he was worth, and I think that it was his vigour that caused the horse to get a trifle unbalanced and stumble fifty yards from the post. It cost him the race; for in a twinkling Lucky Patch was past him and had him beaten. The favourite was beaten a length for second place; Sanity was fourth, Mereworth fifth, and Blandearna sixth.

BRUMBY'S FAILURE.

Venturer ran badly, but the big disappointment of the race was Brumby, who ran a long way below his best form, and was never in it. He settled down in the rear of the field and never improved.

Lucky Patch makes another winner this season of an important long-distance handicap for the National Stud, where the gelded son of Spion Kop and Enrichment was bred.

Sir Alfred Butt, his owner, has certainly been one of fortune's favourites on the Turf this season. This is the second time that Frank Butters's stable has won the Derby Cup; for he secured it two years ago with Ut Majeur.

The racing was interesting, except in the case of the two selling events. The Stainsby Selling Handicap was won by Captain Stanley Wilson's Bold Brigand, who beat Paulus, and the favourite, Social Event, by a length and a neck.

The winner was bought in for 150 guineas, and then Mr. George Hartigan offered Paulus, whom Mr. Stanley Harrison bought to go hurling for 75 guineas. The half-brother of Loch Leven looks a good cut of a horse for the game he is being put to.

There were thirty-five entries for the Drakelow Selling Nursery, but only five ran—a surprising incident in connection with this sort of race at this time of the year. They were five measley fillies, and the best of them proved to be Tom Walls's Ann Grey, who was bought in afterwards for 85 guineas.

FAVOURITE UNPLACED.

They were a good lot in the Friary Nursery, where The Doge was favourite from Peacock's unbeaten colt Boethius, who had won at York in such slashing style in the spring. He was thought to be unbeatable with all his weight, and yet he was being beaten all the way, although he had every chance.

The Doge made the running, but failed to stay, and then Maid of Essex took it up. She appeared to be beating them all when the bottom weight, Nil Nisi, came and slammed them all, winning by two lengths from Sir Hugo Cunliffe-Owen's filly, with Golden Berry filly, who had been there all the way, a length away third, and The Doge fourth.

After the Cup came a great race for the Chaddensden Plate, in which Gordon Richards got the top weight, Old Riley, home by a neck from Grindleton on the rails. It was Old Riley's first victory of the season, and he owed it in great measure to the power which Richards put into his finish.

AN UNLUCKY HORSE.

Grindleton has not won a race this year, and has been an unlucky horse. When Richards rode him at Windsor on Friday he was beaten a head by Vain Bachelor. He has never run a better race than at Doncaster, when he was beaten a short-head by Richards on Fonab.

Manœuvre was beaten to-day by half a length for second place. Fairyhill, who was well fancied, did not stay on after showing up well for a time.

The last race of the day, the Quarndon Maiden Plate, also produced a good finish, the judge being unable to separate Parsan and Divine Lady. Parsan, who is a full-sister to Dastur, is a moderate animal, and has the rare distinction, if it can be called a distinction, of having run two successive dead-heats; for she divided a little stake at Thirsk the other day with Sandalwood. Her owner, the Aga Khan, will not, as owner of the Gimcrack Stakes' winner, Mrs. Rustom, be able to make the speech at the annual dinner of the Gimcrack Club; for he left for India yesterday.

SELECTIONS.

To-morrow there is a meeting at Lingfield, where the Finale Handicap is the most important race. Knight of Knockeevan and Notice Board were the most fancied horses for this race twelve months ago, and they finished first and third. The same pair will be well fancied again to-morrow.

Knight of Knockeevan beat everything except Solatium at Liverpool last week, so we know he is in form. Wenceslas has a chance, and the young horse, Jack Grange, who won so easily at Liverpool on Saturday, may be anything. I choose KNIGHT OF KNOCKEEVAN. If he should not run, Notice Board may win.

Another from Poole's stable, SPANIARD, should win the Open Club Welter Stakes, while TIFFANY may win the Country Nursery.

GALTEE MORE.

TEST OF STAMINA.

KNIGHT OF KNOCKEEVAN MAY WIN FINALE HANDICAP.

THE honour of staging the last flat-racing meeting of the season in the south falls to the lot of the Lingfield Park executive. The Finale Handicap will be a popular centre-piece, for it is decided over two miles on a round course, and some well-known long distance performers are due to run, including Knight of Knockeevan and Notice Board, who were first and third respectively in the race last year.

Knight of Knockeevan is a course specialist and in all probability he will start a clear favourite despite having to give weight to all his opponents. George Poole was disappointed with his display at Liverpool, where, in a good finish, he was beaten less than a length by Solatium over a mile and seven furlongs. He will, however, be all the fitter for that race, which was only his third of the year. He has to meet Chelmarsh on 2lb. worse terms for a neck compared with Aintree weights, but the latter lacks finishing speed.

The distance will be ideal for Beau Frere, whom my Newmarket Correspondent fancies more than Carus and Strathallan. It is said that he has been well trained for this event, but his last two outings have been far from encouraging.

The soft galloping conditions will suit the "evergreen" Arctic Star, but not more so than Wenceslas, who comes well into the argument on his Birmingham form, where he readily accounted for Pelago, Swoon and a useful field over twelve furlongs.

Notice Board, who is 8lb. better off with Knight of Knockeevan compared with last season's race, is another likely to appreciate the state of the going. I am assured that it was the unfavourable conditions which caused his defeat at Hurst Park recently.

I have a regard for Jack Grange. He is penalised 6lb. for his Liverpool victory, but is a fine stayer and at the top of his form. Carus, who is a good stayer, is certain to make them all gallop with his light weight, but I pin my faith to who may find Wenceslas his most troublesome opponent at the finish.

Diana Buttercup, Dorothy Dene, Phanora and Fair Abbess appear to be the pick of the November Nursery runners. The fast course should suit to a nicety. She made no show against Dignitary over six furlongs at Newmarket, but it is on earlier form over the shorter distance that she should be judged. As I know her to be well fancied this time, I shall not be surprised to see her make all the running and defy 9st. 7lb.

Gordon Richards will ride the fancied Home in the County Nursery, in which one can make out a good case for such as Elini filly, G.D. It and SHELDRAKE.

The last-named swerved away his chance when short-headed by Papwood at Worcester, and, as Ann Grey has advertised the form since, he may be the best to stand.

I understand that Poole will reserve for the Open Club Stakes for Amateurs, and, as he ran such a good race when third to Free Fare and Ganga Singh at Hurst Park, I do not oppose him. Capricho and Telegraphic will have a good following.

NEWMARKET NOTES.

GOLDEN MILLER'S PROGRESS: LINGFIELD HINTS.

NEWMARKET, Friday.

THE work was not of a very brisk description this morning. Fred. Butters stripped Spinifex and Wheat Quota, and gave them a fast five furlongs spin. The latter is now at his best, and is not badly weighted in the Leycester Plate at Warwick on Monday.

B. Jarvis gave Davy Jones and Fountains Copse, with Exaggerated, a six furlongs spin at an easy pace, and they are in splendid trim to meet their engagements at Warwick.

C. Leader gave Double Arch, Light o' Love, Itsaboy and Fine Art fifty a smart five furlongs spin, and each presents a clean bill of health.

In view of his Warwick engagement, Black well rattled Ditchford along over a mile and a quarter.

Briscoe gave Flying Home colt a half speed gallop over six furlongs. Redecision was stripped and sent one mile and a half at a good pace, and he should be worth following this winter. Ben. Inglesant and Sleeve Donard, who have had plenty of hurdle practice, travelled one mile and a half at a good pace with Mr. Punch and Golden Miller. I notice that several engagements have been made for the last-named, who is now showing a more trained appearance than he did a few weeks ago, and we shall probably find him among the entries for next year's Grand National.

H. Leader gave Walsh the mount on Penny-a-Liner, and, with Rightene (Fawdon), sent him one mile at a striding pace. I liked the way the first-named moved. He is now finding the going more to his liking, and on the strength of his second to North Drift at Thirsk in a big field he will be entitled to recognition in the Kenilworth Plate at Warwick. Hillsbrow (H. Jelliss), with Mountain Spy and Farola, had a good seven furlongs spin.

Whitaker stripped his Manchester Handicap charge, Andrea (Harrison), and sent him one mile and a quarter at a good pace, Witticism going with him the first mile, and Pretty Obvious and Knight Error the last six furlongs. No fault could be found with him. Although I cannot hear of any excuse for his poor display in the Cambridgeshire, I do not think that was his true form.

At Lingfield Park we shall have about a dozen runners. Robert Peel and will contest the Apprentice Plate, and I prefer the latter.

I like the chance of

better than that of Lady Madcap for the Back-End Selling Handicap, and she will require a lot of beating.

I do not think we saw the best of Beau Frere at Sandown Park, and he should do better in the Finale Handicap. Strathallan will carry his light impost very prominently, as will the improved Carus, and, if a good boy can be found for the latter, he will be a source of danger to in the November Nursery to Tetramor, as she will be suited by the shorter distance than that over which she ran at our last fixture.

BEAU FRERE.

I prefer

DIANA BUTTERCUP (next best)

Leila colt and

represent us in the Country Nursery, and as the latter has done so well in her gallops of late, I give her my vote.

FROM THE HUNTING FIELDS.

WARD UNION HOUNDS.

Good sport under ideal conditions followed the meet at Dunshaughlin on Wednesday. It was a glorious day after a very wet night, and scent was much improved on the softened ground. The enlargement was made, as usual, in Trivett.

The pack ran at a fast pace through Trivett and Bonestown, across the Grange road into Gaulstown, and on over the Hall-town "double" for Cabin Hill. The stag turned by Grange and re-crossed Halltown towards Lagore, and ran back by Rackens-town and Thomastown to the outskirts of Dunshaughlin village. Getting clear, via Johnstown and Clonross, the hunt went on by Rath Hill and The Poorhouse, across the Bush Farm to Ten Mile Bush before crossing the main road for Boylan's gorse covert. The pack ran into view here, and raced their quarry by Porterstown and Rathbeggan into the Tolka tributary at Black Bull, where a safe capture was made after a good hunt of 70 minutes, without a check.

BRAY HARRIERS.

A GOOD FOX HUNT.

From the meet at Newcastle, where Mr. and Mrs. Manning, as usual, had open house, Mr. Cruise's glen was first tried, but proved to be tenantless, and a hare found in the turnips just beyond gave a couple of rings, and was left. La Touche's and Miss Evans's both proved blank. An evening fox found in Wingfield's woods, after being hustled about for some time, went away, and was eventually rolled over in the open. This redeemed an otherwise poor day.

On Wednesday, 15th, a large gathering met the Master at Powerscourt Arms, Calary. A move was made to Mr. John Power's farm at Ballinastoe, where that good sportsman provided us with no less than a leash. Soon after hounds were put into the firs plantation a fox was seen to slip away at the southern end. The pack, however, spoke to a fox at the other end, and immediately he ran through the covert in view of the field, and, near the road, broke through Mr. Power's land. Hounds were slow coming out, but this was soon explained, as another fox went away at racing pace from the same spot just in front of the pack. Taking the same line as his predecessor for a couple of fields, he turned right; as if for Calary. The first fox, however, was selected, and he ran at a fast pace from Mr. Power's farm straight across the Roundwood road, where an "unavoidable" double on to the tarmac had to be negotiated (happily without disaster). The line continued by Mr. Will Cooley's farm and Mr. Byrne's land, heading for D'jouce, short of which he bore left-handed and crossed the upper road, and over the hill towards the Sheep Banks, and pointed for Mr. Guinness's lake. A short check at the gates on the road was soon put right, and, scent being good, the pack ran hard over the moor right to the shores of Lough Dan, where this good fox was eventually lost in the woods bordering the lake, after a really fine hunt, covering a big tract of country. Time—One hour and 25 minutes.

MEATH HOUNDS.

Meeting at Ackare on Thursday hounds found at once in Woodtown, and hunted back to the hill wood, thence over the Ardee road, pointing for Bengerstown, and turning left-handed at Gun Hill lost the quarry near Woodtown. The Laurels near the house provided a fox, which got into a shore near the Drumconrath-Ardee road. From Seven Acres a fox went away over the hill to near Sally-brook, which he left on the right, and went on to Drumaragher, whence he ran to Sally-brook, and back again to Drumaragher, where hounds were stopped.

Yesterday from Rahinston was a busy day. Hounds found at once in the gorse covert, and after going through the plantation bore right-handed to Clonacurry, where the fox got to ground. Rathmoylon held a brace, and hounds ran very fast to Coolderry to ground. Finding again in Rathmoylon they ran through Coolderry and Hughes's furze to Trammond. Here they wheeled to the left, past the village, and on to Rathmoylon covert, and eventually lost their fox at Coolderry. There were several foxes in Money-more, one of which broke on the Laracor side, and ran out to the moate hill, and back to the covert,, where he did not tarry, and going away again made good his escape at Dogstown.

For the information of those who are not already aware of the fact it may be mentioned that return tickets at single fares for horses and grooms are issued by the Great Southern Railways Company to stations on their line for meets of the Meath Hounds.

EASY VICTORY FOR WINCARNIS.

STOCKADE AND ROLLING WAVES SCORE.

Wincarnis regained winning form last night at Harold's Cross Park by a success in the Leinster Plate. Stockade justified favouritism by winning the Munster Plate, and Rolling Waves won the Connaught Plate after a good finish with Fancy Beauty. Hearty Fellow followed up a recent success in winning the Metropolitan Hurdle, and Kymp's Pride was a lucky winner of the Midland Hurdle. Details:—

BOXING.

IRISH JUNIOR FINALS.

SPLENDID FLY-WEIGHT FIGHT.

The first Irish Junior Championship concluded last night at Portobello Barracks, and provided excellent boxing as far as the finals were concerned. The best fights were in the two lightest weights, and J. Jackson, of Ballyhaunis, was the hero of the evening. After taking a terrible pounding from Stafford, the aggressive Trinity man, in the first minute of the fly-weight final, Jackson made an amazing recovery, and scored almost point for point in the second and third rounds, despite the fact that his right eye was closed. Both gave a splendid display, and it was the best fight of the night.

The smartest boxer on view was R. Hyland, of Bray, who, after a bad start against a bigger opponent in A. Callan, scored frequently with perfectly-timed punches from long range in the second and third rounds, while his footwork was so good that Callan was completely puzzled. Another clever victory was that of J. Rock over a Belfast lad, Mills, in the feather-weight final. This was a very fast bout, but Rock's punching was straighter and harder, and he gained a well-deserved verdict.

EVENDEN DISAPPOINTING.

Private Evenden, who has rather more experience than most of those fighting in these championships, was disappointing against P. Whelan, of St. Andrew's, who made excellent use of the ring, and prevented Evenden from making it a long range fight. Evenden did most of the scoring, but he did not land a really telling punch in the three rounds. The next two titles went to provincial clubs. J. Herlihy, after showing no sort of form in the semi-final of the welter-weight, boxed splendidly against a difficult opponent, Private Clancy, in the final. Clancy, who is very strong, kept on boring in with his head, looking for a knock-out at any price, but Herlihy scored all the time from his opponent's rushes, and took very little punishment himself. The middle-weight final was spoilt by M. Kelly's persistent lying-on tactics, for which he should really have been disqualified. His opponent, Comney, of Sligo, landed the few punches seen during this fight. The cruiser final was more of a wrestling match than boxing. As Garda N. McNaught had to return to Boyle on Thursday night, Garda Felix Cooper had a walk-over in the heavy-weight final. Results:—

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

STIFF TASK FOR QUEEN'S.

UNBEATEN ULSTER TEAM TO MEET LANSDOWNE TO-DAY.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY, hailed as the best side in Ireland after their victory over Trinity in the College Park recently, and so far unbeaten, meet Lansdowne at Lansdowne road to-day in what should be a most interesting match. Lansdowne will have N. H. Lambert back at centre, but will still be without Davy, and his absence may cost his side the match. Queen's ought to have the better of matters forward, and, if so, the backs will be hard to stop. There should be any amount of good football in this game.

Next in interest comes the Bective Wanderers' match at Donnybrook. Bective have not lost a match in Ireland so far, though they have been beaten on tour, and, with their strongest side, may repeat an early season's victory over Wanderers, whose backs have been unconvincing lately. Blackrock and Clontarf will have a keen forward tussle at Williamstown. If the Blackrock forwards can hold the powerful Clontarf pack, their backs might just bring them through. University College's speed behind the scrum will give them a victory over Monkstown. Any other result would be surprising; while Malone, who ran Queen's to a point recently, should have little difficulty in beating Palmerston. Garryowen, so formidable at home, may overcome Old Wesley, while Trinity, on tour, might reverse the Oxford result at Edinburgh's expense.

WEEK-END LEAGUE GAMES.

CORK VISIT CRUMLIN TO-MORROW: BOHEMIANS AT MILLTOWN.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE chief features of interest in this week's-end Free State League programme are the meetings of Shamrock Rovers and Bohemians to-day and St. James's Gate and Cork to-morrow. Rovers always thrive on work, and a hard match seldom seems to affect their chances. They proved last Wednesday that they have the best defence and the cleverest wing forwards of any team in the Free State. If the inside men were up to the same standard they would be almost unbeatable. I expect them to take the points from Bohemians to-day, as the latter are not playing well at present, and will still be without Horlacher, their best half-back.

Cork will have a task to keep their 100 per cent. record at Crumlin to-morrow, for St. James's Gate are a sound and level side, always good on their own ground. In their recent engagements Cork have produced the best football seen this season. They will have to do the same to-morrow if they want to win; a draw appears to be the most probable result. Drumcondra received a check at the hands of Dundalk last Sunday, but they ought to return to winning form at Bray Unknowns' expense, since the latter seldom seem to produce good form away from home. I cannot see Dolphin worrying Dundalk very much at the latter's ground. Cork Bohs. and Shelbourne should have a keen struggle at Cork. The visitors will introduce a new left half in McFarlane, a cross-Channel capture, but unless they can shoot better than in recent matches, they will not get a badly-needed victory.

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN QUIET.

ALLIANCE GAS STRONG.

Dublin Stock market yesterday was under the shadow of the new account, which opens on Monday next, and business was quiet. Price movements were small.

Free State Funds were unchanged, and Land Bonds fell to 110. The War Loan was firmer, reflecting the steadier market in London. Corporation stocks were steady, and Banks were passed over.

Among Rails, Great Southern Ord. repeated 23, and the Debs. fell ½ to 58¼. Great Northern Guar. was ½ lower. Grand Canal Ord. dropped 2s. 9d. at 37s. 6d., and the Pref. rose to 76s.

Guinness units were less active but weaker at 99s. 1½d. Dublin Distillers Ord. repeated 7s., and Distillers (Scotch) rose to 81s. 9d. Dunville moved up to 30s. Alliance Gas was strong, and rose ⅛ to 13¼. Bolands Ord. repeated 107s., and Burke Pref. rose to 39s. Chocolate Debs. were dealt in from 9s. 6d. to 9s. 9d. prem. for the £10 unit.

Among the big Industrials, Coats were firm on the quarterly dividend, and Imperial Tobacco rose 1s. 3d. to 111s. All other price changes were adverse, Courtaulds' loss being 1s. 4½d. at 42s. 3d.

Helys are again paying a shilling per share interim.

The Stock Exchanges will be open to-day (Saturday).

The new Dublin Corporation Loan for £1,000,000 will probably make its appearance towards the end of next week.

LONDON RECOVERING.

BRITISH FUNDS IN DEMAND.

The improved conditions which developed in the later dealings in the London Stock markets on Thursday were again apparent at the commencement of business yesterday, and assisted by the sharp improvement in the dollar, markets rapidly developed a confident appearance and quotations appreciated sharply all along the line. A certain amount of buying was in progress, while the selling orders which had dominated markets recently dried up, and prices finished at about the best of the day, showing substantial advances. The subsequent fluctuations of the exchange caused some irregularity, but on the whole markets finished on a confident note.

A prominent feature was the advance in British Funds, fresh American buying being in progress, and quotations were not slow to respond, so that at the end strong advances were secured all round. War Loan 3½ p.c. were outstanding with a rise of ⅞ on the day to 100⅞, while the 3½ p.c. Conversion Loan scored a similar improvement to 100⅞. Local Loans shot forward to 86⅝, this being ½ better than the overnight level, while Consols 2½ and 4 p.c. were ½ and ¼ firmer at 70⅞ and 109⅞ respectively. Funding Loan were another good market, and the 3 p.c., 4½ p.c. and 5 p.c. Conversion Loans all returned materially enhanced levels. India stocks joined in the recovery, the 3 p.c. and 3½ p.c. each gaining ½.

Foreign Government stocks, however, disclosed an irregular trend, though the balance of movements favoured holders. Principal interest was directed to German Bonds, and in the face of a sustained inquiry quotations appreciated smartly. At the close the 7 p.c. were 2 points up at 85¼, while the 5½ p.c. finished 2½ points to the good at 58¼. Japanese issues were a trifle better and Brazilians scored fractional improvements, but Chinese issues were inclined to droop, while Poland Sevens slipped back to 75, against 76 overnight. In sympathy with the improved conditions obtaining elsewhere in the House, British Rails opened on a strong note and quite a good business was put through early. Later, however, interest waned and the best levels were not held, nevertheless the closing rates were still the turn higher in a number of instances. Trading among Colonial and Foreign Rails was on a comparatively modest scale, but a distinctly firmer undertone was evident and prices where changed moved favourably to holders. Buenos Ayres Great Southern and the Western Argentine Ord. were each put on a point, while "Can-Pacs" rallied smartly to 11⅞ against 11¼ overnight.

A strong tone characterised the Industrial market, and prices went to substantially higher levels all round. Breweries continued in good support and finished very firm, while Motors, Insurance, and Textiles scored good gains. Among the Miscellaneous Industrials, Triplex Safety Glass recovered strongly and United Molasses improved sharply. The Transatlantic descriptions were outstanding, and after opening appreciably higher on the overnight advance on Wall Street values improved further during the course of the day. In other directions American influences had a favourable effect on Oil shares, while Mines generally showed a firm front, Kaffirs being to the lead and enjoying a brisk business. Rubber shares, however, remained depressed.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

BREWERIES FAVOURED.

Renewed support was again forthcoming in the Industrial Market yesterday, though most of the buying was said to be in connection with bear covering operations. Sentiment was assisted by the strong tone of Wall Street overnight following the improvement in the dollar, and all the trans-Atlantic counters responded. Later some irregularity developed owing to the evening-up of commitments on the eve of the carry-over preliminaries.

The trans-Atlantic counters responded to the overnight lead from Wall Street. After noon advances from that centre indicated an irregular trend, and they finished under the best in the late dealings. Nickels closed at 21 after 21⅛, and Hydros at 5⅜ after 5⅛, with Holdings firm at 1⅜.

Cables and Wireless stocks rallied somewhat on a little bear closing, the Preference finishing at 71 and the "A" Ordinary at 23. Canadian Marconis were 9d. better at 10s.

An irregular tendency characterised Motor descriptions. Austins were a better market, improving ⅛ to 3¼. Standards were in request, and put on 1s. 9d. at 45s. 9d., and small gains were shown by Hawker Aircraft and Napiers. On the other hand, Rolls-Royce gave way 6d. to 67s. 9d., and shrinkages of a few pence occurred in Thomas Tilling, Fords and Singers.

Transactions in Iron, Coal and Steel shares were of little importance, and affected quotations to only a trifling extent.

There was little business passing in Electric shares.

Buyers were again in evidence for Breweries, the favourite being Benskins, which finished 1s. 9d. to the good at 55s. 3d. Bass, Allsopps, City of London, Courage, Ind Coope, Meuxs, Taylor, Walker and Watney Deferred all gained a few pence. The only dull spots were Guinness, Ohlssons and South African Ordinary.

Among the Distillery issues, Distillers were up to 81s. 10½d. at one time, but reacted eventually to 81s. 3d. Vancouvers improved to 9s. 4½d., Dublin Distillers to 7s., with Booths slightly harder at 21s.

Moderate support was given to Tobaccos, but they finished with an irregular appearance. "Bats" improved to 5⅞, and "Imps" to 111s., while Carreras "A" held around 8. Although one or two issues again lost ground, the general tendency in the Textile group was rather steadier. English Sewing Cottons rallied 6d. to 44s., and improvements of a few pence were recorded in Calico Printers. Fine Cotton Spinners, Patons and Baldwins and Kelsall and Kemps. J. and P. Coats were finally 4½d. harder at 61s. 4½d. following the declaration of the usual quarterly dividend. Bradford Dyers, however, were a notable exception, falling 7½d. to 15s. 10½d.

Where altered, Rayon shares generally showed improvement. Courtaulds were notable for a sharp rally, being finally 1s. 7½d. higher at 42s. 4½d., while British Celanese hardened a few pence to 14s. 4½d. With the overnight improvement in New York, American Celanese opened higher around 8½, and subsequently further improved to 8⅝, and were finally ¼ higher on the day to 8⅞. Canadians put on ⅛ to 4.

Little of interest occurred among Drapery and Stores issues. Woolworths were subjected to further liquidation during the earlier dealings and dipped to 95s., but eventually closed only 1½d. lower on balance at 95s. 4½d.

Following the previous day's dulness, a generally better tendency was in evidence among Miscellaneous descriptions, though in places prices continued to lose ground. British Oxygen enjoyed a steady investment demand, being finally 1s. 3d. higher at 43s. 9d., while Murex were another noticeably strong spot, showing an advance of 5s. at 65s. The new shares rose 3s. 9d. to 63s. 9d. Dunlops remained active, hardening to 37s. 4½d., and United Molasses rallied 6d. on balance to 12s. 10½d., though this was after touching 13s. 6d. Boots Pure Drug rallied a few pence to 38s. 3d., and small improvements occurred in Radiation, Spillers Ord. and Defd., and Turner and Newall, Wall Paper Manufacturers Defd., however, were finally 6d. lower at 50s.

OIL SHARES FIRMER.

A distinctly firmer tendency prevailed at the commencement of business in the Oil Share market yesterday. This was attributed to the rally in the United States dollar, and the satisfactory advices from New York overnight regarding the course of American Oil stocks, which mostly came over higher. The volume of business, however, remained small all round throughout the day. Sentiment governed the course of prices, which were put up even though there was little going on in a similar manner to that in which they had been lowered in the two preceding days.

When it was found that very little local demand existed prices were inclined to sag. Moreover, those who had bought cheap stock earlier in the week were taking profits. At the close prices, with only a few unimportant exceptions, were higher, although the movements were generally of small amount.

COMPANY MEETING.

ELECTRIC AND MUSICAL INDUSTRIES.

RECENT IMPROVEMENT IN TRADING.

PROFIT-EARNING RESUMED.

MR. ALFRED CLARK ON THE OUTLOOK.

The second annual general meeting of Electrical and Musical Industries, Ltd., was held yesterday at Winchester House, London, E.C.

Mr. Alfred Clark (the chairman), in the course of his speech, said:—We are here to-day to present accounts, which once more show a trading loss by the subsidiary companies, but, serious as it is, it is substantially less than the loss we faced last year. I hope that you will be able to leave this meeting with the feeling that the end of adverse trading, if not actually with us, is well within sight, and that we are about to enter upon a period of profit making.

Last year I took up a considerable amount of your time in explaining the company's situation with regard to foreign markets, showing how much the business, as a whole, had been in the past dependent upon the export business of the English factories, as well as upon inter-trading between the foreign factories and branches. I informed you that the business had then been very seriously retarded because of the almost universal restrictions of imports by one means or another, which had come upon us with a rapidity which gave us little time, through reorganisation and economies, to keep pace with the falling trade.

Since then, with one or two slight exceptions, there has been no relaxation whatever in these restrictive measures. On the contrary, a number of countries have still further increased the impediments to international trade. Germany, which was one of our principal markets, is to-day in a state of upheaval which renders it impossible to foreshadow the commercial possibilities in that country one way or the other.

RECORDS AND RADIO.

At home the sales of acoustic gramophones and records show a decrease on the previous year, and I should like to take this opportunity to say a few words in regard to the gramophone business, which, for long years had been, both at home and abroad, our principal source of profit. It has so often been suggested to me that radio broadcasting must help the record business that I feel I should put the position clearly before you. The gramophone record is essentially a means of home entertainment, and it must naturally follow that if the broadcasting companies pour into the homes a continual supply of music for a small annual fee or, as in some countries, no fee at all, radio thus becomes a competitor to the gramophone. It must not be forgotten that the gramophone record has many advantages over radio—it is far better produced and generally employs better artists, and enables its user to choose what he likes, and to play it when he likes.

This time last year our trade in the British radio industry was moving upwards, but shortly after our meeting price cutting became rampant, due, undoubtedly, to large unsold stocks. Our healthy increase in sales was not maintained while these competitive goods were being liquidated, nor, as I have explained, were the home factories able to counteract this set-back by any increase in the export trade.

The policy of reorganisation, coupled with economies, has been actively pursued, and it is to this work that we must attribute the reduction in the trading losses. In a number of the minor territories, where we have been unable to anticipate a possibility of profitable trading in the near future, branches have been closed.

A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.

In May and June, however, a distinct change came about, and sales began substantially to increase, but the upward movement arrived too late in the trading year to be of advantage to our present figures. Not only was this advance in business shown in the British Isles, but it was also noticeable in exports to and trade in some of the foreign countries. I am very happy, indeed, to be able to tell you that this increased business has since been maintained. The demand for the Company's products has been such as, barring unforeseen set-backs, augurs well for the balance of the year.

The manufacture of radio receiving sets and radio gramophones has largely helped to fill the gaps in the factories caused by decreasing gramophone work, and of the two businesses radio in England is now the greater. In the few short years in which we have been in the radio business the Company's goods have attained the premier position in the British Isles. Our turnover is undoubtedly the largest in the industry here, and our goods are of that same high quality which established and maintained the reputation of the companies in the gramophone trade. Our radio business is not yet capable of attaining the profit ratio which our gramophone business achieved after thirty years of manufacturing and development experience, but it is already making rapid progress.

HOME BUSINESS PROSPERING.

To put the present position in a nutshell our home business is prospering, and is marching with the general revival of trade in this country. As to the rest I cannot do better than quote, with slight alteration, the words of the Prime Minister at the Guildhall. If there are any doubts about the continuance of our prosperity those doubts are not interinal to our own economy or to the policy of your Board. They belong to the state of the world outside.

There is no substantial change in the balance-sheet and profit and loss account of the Company this year as compared with the previous year.

In the combined statement of the Gramophone Company and Columbia Graphophone Company the total amount under the heading "creditors" is about the same as last year In detail, however, there is a difference, for it will be noticed that this item contains no reserve for income tax, none being required this year. The sub item of amounts due to subsidiary companies shows an increase, due to the Board's consistent policy of keeping at the lowest possible figure the cash held in foreign countries. Wherever possible we have withdrawn cash from abroad to avoid risks in connection with foreign exchange, or further restrictions against the transference of money.

Reserves, profit and loss account, etc., disclose the amount brought forward from the previous year, from which have been deducted the losses for last year of these companies and their wholly owned subsidiaries.

THE RESERVE.

The amount transferred from reserve to the asset side in the accounts to June 30, 1932, now stands at £1,716,000, against £2,094,000. The difference of £378,000 has been specifically allocated to the writing down of land and buildings, machinery and plant, and furniture and fittings. As explained in the statement, this reserve is one which, in addition to depreciation at normal rates, by which we mean the rates of depreciation which it has been the custom of the companies to apply in the past, is to provide for exceptional losses on factories closed, depreciation in investments in subsidiary companies, and losses incurred by them. During the year we have been unable to dispose of any substantial amount of the assets involved in closed factories. Some £40,000 represents the amount received from the disposals effected, but the market has not been a good one in which to sell property of this kind, and sales were only made when we had reasonable offers.

Land and buildings, machinery and plant, and furniture and fittings are all less than last year, due not only to the usual depreciation, but also to the amount transferred from the reserve, as I have just explained.

The item of investments in subsidiary companies has decreased by £130,500. The whole of this decrease represents losses of wholly owned subsidiary companies which have been written off to profit and loss account, as shown on the other side of the statement.

Stock-in-trade and work in progress is £182,000 less, due to increased efficiency in the factories, enabling them to work with smaller stocks.

CASH POSITION.

Investments in Government securities and cash in hand and at the bank, with a total of £1,458,000, are some £75,000 over last year. This is a very satisfactory feature of our statement, and adds greatly to the strength of the company's position. Shareholders will realise that, with contracted trade, cash tends to accumulate, but as trade expands more cash will be required for the purposes of the business.

PROSPECTS.

All classes of shareholders may feel confident that, just as soon as the earnings of the company warrant it, the directors propose to resume payment of the Preference dividends, and the possibility of dealing with this situation in January next is dependent only on the continuance of the present indications of revived prosperity.

It is, of course, expected that at a general meeting some idea should be given to shareholders of the board's view of the prospects of the business for the current year, and I know that our directors are anxious to take the shareholders into their confidence. Shareholders can well understand our limitations in this direction. We have been, and still are, however, faced with a series of situations at home and abroad, and which have a direct bearing upon our trading profits. Consequently any survey of the future must be based upon certain assumptions. The fact is that we are now operating at a profit, and if we may assume that during the coming months conditions remain substantially as they have been since last May, then we feel that we shall have turned the corner.

TELEVISION.

At the last meeting I mentioned television as being still in the experimental stage. Active and, I may say, very successful work has been carried on throughout the year in our research laboratories at Hayes. Successful demonstrations have been given to the technicians of the Post Office and the British Broadcasting Corporation, and, as you will have seen by a recent notice issued in the Press by the B.B.C., our apparatus is to be installed in Broadcasting House early next year for the purpose of carrying out trials under the conditions existing at that centre. Television broadcasting, however, is not expected to count as an early profit-earner.

From the directors' report you will have seen that the board has co-opted two new members. Both Sir Arthur Roberts and Mr. Hill have been for many years directors of the Columbia Graphophone Company. They have, from the inception of this company, generously assisted the board. The directors felt that it was in the interests of the shareholders that these gentlemen be invited to join the board and so be in a position to give the company more fully the benefit of their experience.

WORK OF MANAGING DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

I cannot close without making special reference to the ork of your managing director, Mr. Louis Sterling, and his able staff. Their burden during the last year has been heavy. Disappointments they have had to meet in the most unexpected places and at the most inopportune times. The complications in the foreign markets, and particularly in the German situation, have not rendered any easier the carrying out of their reorganisation plans. That they are achieving success is to their everlasting credit, and is due to the persistent hard work and ability of Mr. Sterling as their leader. I am sure that the shareholders will feel grateful to him and his co-workers at home and abroad—in the offices and the factories—and will cordially join with the board in the expression of our sincere appreciation of their efforts.

The report and accounts were adopted.

THE MONEY MARKET

TREASURY BILL RATE UNCHANGED.

The price of gold yesterday fell 4d. further to 128s. 2d. per ounce fine, being linked on a franc rate of 82¼. There was a premium of 9d. per ounce included in the price. About £325,000 was in the market, and was taken for destinations not disclosed. There was again no change in the American price of gold.

There was a quiet demand for money yesterday, the usual charge for short loans being ½ per cent. Bill rates were steady on the Treasury Bill results. Fine three months' Bank Bills were quoted at 1⅞ per cent. and the "hot" Treasuries were 1 per cent.

Applications were received at the Bank of England for £45,000,000 Treasury Bills. Tenders, dated Monday to Friday of next week at £99 15s. 2d., get about 75 per cent. above in full. Tenders, dated Saturday at £99 15s. 3d. and above, receive in full. These figures indicate an average rate of about 1⅝ per cent., or the same as for last week's bills. Silver improved ⅛d. on China buying to 18¾d. per ounce for spot and 18⅞d. for forward delivery.

The dollar was 21c. dearer at the close of business yesterday than on the preceding day. The steady decline in the value of the dollar, which had continued for over four weeks almost without interruption, was thus arrested. On the first four days of this week alone the rate has risen by 46½c. The more favourable news from America, which caused the dollar rate to fall to 5.26 in New York overnight, was mainly responsible for yesterday's improvement in London. Dollars were nominally quoted at 5.30 at the outset, as against 5.50 at the previous close, but a reaction soon took place, and within an hour the exchange had risen to 5.39. The set-back was only temporary, however, and the rate fell steadily until the late afternoon, when 5.26½ was touched. The close for the day was 21c. lower on balance at 5.29. The Canadian dollar opened at about 5.11, and improved at one time to 5.00. At the close the quotation was 11½c. lower on the day at 5.12. The franc exchange moved between 82⅛ and 82⅛. The final quotation was ⅛ higher than on Thursday at 82½. The Swiss rate rose 1c. to 16.66 and the Belgian rate 1½ to 23.16. Reichsmarks closed 2pf. cheaper at 13.53.

LONDON MINING MARKET STEADIER.

MORE CONFIDENT FEELING PREVAILS.

The recovery in the dollar was reflected in all Mining departments. No great expansion of business occurred, but a more confident feeling prevailed and buying orders made a welcome reappearance.

A firm opening in the Kaffir market was justified during the course of the day by the advent of support both locally and from the Cape. Paris sold at first, but later was the source of a small demand. A fair amount of buying was in progress for the new account, and some substantial rises were shown on the day.

Miscellaneous Gold shares joined in the upward movement, and Coppers quickly responded to the dollar recovery and the consequent hardening of the market. Roans and Rhodesian Selection were particularly prominent.

Tins were moderately active with a firm tendency. Closing prices :—

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

Will U.S. Sell Gold?

The market is rather inclined to assume that the American gold policy necessarily consists exclusively of buying gold. It is not untimely to recall, however, that President Roosevelt, in his broadcast statement announcing the new policy, spoke about selling as well as buying gold abroad (writes The Financial News). If he meant what he said in this respect, the present situation provides an exceptional opportunity to prove it. Evidently, the American authorities are anxious to regain control over the dollar and to regulate at will its movement, instead of allowing it to fall entirely under market influences. Their first attempt in that direction, namely, to leave the price of gold unchanged for two days, has failed. It is probable that they would not get the dollar back to its gold parity even if they were to leave the gold price unchanged for another day or two, or even if they were to reduce the gold price slightly. The obvious way of restoring the dollar to the vicinity of its gold parity would be to carry the gold policy to its logical conclusion. When the dollar failed to depreciate in sympathy with the gold price the American authorities made some minor purchases of gold abroad. Now that the dollar has failed to appreciate to its gold parity, the obvious thing for them to do is to sell gold abroad and buy dollars with the proceeds, until the discrepancy has disappeared and their control over the dollar is restored.

Gold Fields Board.

The directors of the Consolidated Gold Fields of South Africa and New Consolidated Gold Fields, as already announced, have appointed Brigadier-General Sir Samuel Wilson a director of both companies. Brigadier-General Sir Samuel Herbert Wilson,G.C.M.G., K.C.B., K.B.E., has had a distinguished military career, and has held many important official positions. From 1925 until his recent retirement he was Permanent Under-Secretary for the Colonies. Previously, from 1918 to 1921, he was Principal Assistant Secretary of the Committee of Imperial Defence and Secretary to the Overseas Defence Committee, Home Ports Defence Committee, and Imperial Communication Committee. He was Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Trinidad and Tobago from 1921 to 1924, and in the following year Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of Jamaica. In referring to Brigadier-General Sir Samuel Wilson's latest appointment, his career by an inadvertence, was confused with that of Sir Samuel Wilson, formerly Senior Commissioner, Land Purchase Commission, Northern Ireland.

British Plaster Board.

To provide for future capital requirements and to ensure that the present liquid state of the company's resources is maintained, the directors propose to increase the capital from £100,000 to £250,000. The directors recommend that 100,000 of the new shares be offered to shareholders at par in the proportion of one new share of £1 for each £1 share held. The balance of 50,000 new shares will be reserved for future developments. It is also proposed to sub-divide the shares into four shares of 5s. each. It is stated that the new plant has come into operation and has worked at full capacity. The directors have entered into a contract for the purchase of freehold land and factories at Erith, Kent, where a new plant will be erected capable of doubling the present output. Sales for the six months ended October 31st last have been in excess of those for the corresponding period.

American Price for Gold.

The Government purchase price of gold yesterday was unchanged at $35.56.

Old Bleach Linen Co.

Particulars are now available concerning the coming issue on behalf of the Old Bleach Linen Co., Ltd., which is being formed to take over the assets of the concern already in existence and bearing the same title in Northern Ireland with works at Randalstown, Co. Antrim. The authorised capital will be £500,000, of which £250,000 will be credited as fully-paid up. It will be divided into £100,000 of 6 per cent. Cumulative £1 Preference shares, £100,000 Ordinary £1 shares, and £50,000 7 per cent. Preferred Ordinary shares. The whole of the 6 per cent. Preference shares will be issued to the public at par towards the end of this month. The balance of the issued capital in Ordinary and Preferred Ordinary shares will be taken by the vendors as full purchase consideration. It is understood that the average profits of the Old Bleach Linen Co. over the past three years were round £18,000, or sufficient to cover the division on the new 6 per cent. Preference capital three times over. The total assets of the new company will be in the neighbourhood of £300,000.

Back to Normality in Chile.

Chile has only 30,000 unemployed, according to a Government announcement. At the same time, an index of returning industrial prosperity has been issued, indicating that, after three years of turbulence and a number of changes of Government, Chile is settling down to peace and work. The Cabinet is not renewing the law which concedes it special powers for dealing with civil strife. Therefore, there will be no more deportations, Press restrictions or emergency legislation.

New "Johnnies" Deal.

It is understood that the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company has acquired from the Anglo-Transvaal Company a substantial interest in the Rand leases of the Vogelstruisfontein Mine at Roodepoort, whose recent issue of shares was over-subscribed by nearly £3,000,000. Official details of the transaction are not yet available, but it is believed they will include a provision for preferential rights for Anglo-Transvaal shareholders. The work of allotting Vogelstruisfontein share certificates is completed, and official dealings are expected to commence on the local Stock Exchange next week. An application for permission to deal on the London Stock Exchange is to be made simultaneously.

£6,000,000 New Assurance Business.

An indication of the improvement in economic conditions is revealed by the figures of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, whose business year in the United Kingdom closed yesterday with the huge total of £6,000,000 of new business. The record month of the year was November, with new business totalling £800,000.

Deducting the Debenture interest, already paid, which absorbed £23,750, there remains a balance to be carried forward of £20. As was the case in the previous year, the report adds that no depreciation has been provided on machinery and fixed plant, but the plant throughout the works has been maintained in an efficient condition. For the preceding year there was a balance from profit and loss account of £3,924, after transferring £60,000 from contingencies reserve, and £43,333 was brought in. In the balance sheet bank overdraft and interest accrued have risen from £278,953 to £300,039, while bills payable and sundry creditors stand at £146,355, against sundry creditors of £109,198 at June 30, 1932. On the assets side, stocks of stores and work in progress have risen from £89,160 to £127,034, while the cash item, which is barely altered, stands at £2,081, against £1,166.

Goldsbrough Mort.—Directors have decided to await figures full year ending 31st March next before making any recommendation as to a dividend for the current year.

Lydenburg Platinum Areas.—The report for the year ended June 30 last states that there was a deficit of £2,092, arising chiefly from the cost of caretaking and maintenance, with the result that the credit balance brought in of £958 is absorbed and a debit of £1,134 is carried forward. For the previous year there was a debit of £5,511.

Larut Tin Fields.—Interim dividend of 1¼ per cent. This is the first payment since 1929, when 5 per cent. was forthcoming.

National Bank of Scotland.—The directors of the National Bank of Scotland, Ltd., have resolved to recommend to the proprietors, subject to audit, a dividend at the rate of 16 per cent., less income tax.

United Velvet Cutters.—Payment of interim dividend on the Ordinary Shares deferred pending year's results. (Same.)

THE POTEEN TRAFFIC.

MAN AND TWO BOYS SENT TO PRISON.

John McLean (50), James Boyle (17), and Joseph McKenna (18), of Moneysallin, Kilrea, were, at Coleraine, sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with hard labour, and also fined £10 each, with the alternative of another month in jail, without hard labour, on charges of being at a place where illicit distillation was in progress, and having illicit spirits in their possession.

Sergeant Quigley gave evidence that at 2.30 in the morning he and a constable were in the vicinity of the house of McLean, who lived alone, and heard the rattling of bottles. Entering the house they found a still in full working order and the defendants engaged in bottling spirits. McLean was under the influence of drink.

The solicitor for the defence, Mr. Charles MacLaughlin, said that McLean was away from home all day, and did not return until midnight. He was then drunk, and the other defendants left him home. They saw someone running away from the house, and they denied having had anything to do with the still.

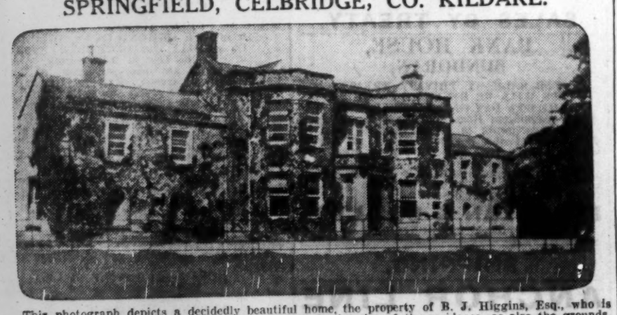
SPRINGFIELD, CELBRIDGE, CO. KILDARE.



This photograph depicts a decidedly beautiful home, the property of B. J. Higgins, Esq., who is changing his residence. One would have to inspect the interior of the residence, as also the grounds, gardens and orchard, including the beautiful enclosed rock-garden, to realise the attractiveness of the property. We further invite inspection of the lands, which comprise deep, rich and fairly heavy loam, resting on limestone rubble. The pasture, which constitutes the best grasses for fattening purposes, is rich and succulent, owing to the depth of the soil, which retains sufficient moisture for plant food. The lands are divided into suitable fields—well fenced and watered. The property contains 75 acres, Statute measure, more or less. Held in Fee-Simple, subject to a small terminable annuity to Land Commission. The situation is very excellent, commanding beautiful views of the Dublin Mountains; convenient to Dublin; central for hunting—Kildare Hounds, Kildare Harriers, Ward Hounds, and South Dublin. The Residence, which is non-basement, contains entrance porch with lounge hall, 3 reception" rooms, 5 family bedrooms, servants' apartments; central heating throughout; excellent water supply; bathrooms, h. and c.; excellent labour-saving kitchen, storerooms, pantries, larder, etc. The courtyard comprises garage for two cars, stabling, man's house, lofted. The outer yard comprises stabling, cattle sheds and hay barn. There are two gate entrances to the property, and three lodges.

We are in a position to state that very seldom has such a compact residential holding as this, situated so conveniently and in such a beautiful part of the Co. Kildare, come into the open market.

We are instructed to Sell this Property on the above date in our Salerooms, Lincoln place, at the hour of 2 o'clock.
